B.C. Tel Ruling Appealed

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Federation of Labor announced today it will appeal a ruling that allowed B.C. Telephone Company to keep some of its financial dealings secret during a rate-increase hearing before the Canadian Transport Commission.

The ruling was made earlier Tuesday by the Canadian Transport Commission on the second day of a public hearing into the telephone company's application for a general rate increase.

The attorney-general's department and the federation had both asked that B.C. Telephone be ordered to supply details about its dealings with sister companies in the General Telephone and Electronic Corporation group.

Later Alex Macdonald, representing the federation, said the organization would refer the decision to the federal court, formerly the Exchequer Court, under a section of the Federal Court Act that allows the court's appeal division to set aside decisions of federal boards and commissions.

ADJOURNMENT

He also said that the federation would ask that the rate increase hearing be adjourned in the event an appeal was made to the federal court.

In announcing the commissions's ruling Tuesday, chairman Pierre Taschereau said the commissioners had sympathy for the principle that there be fuller disclosure but lacked the power to compel B.C. Telephone to detail its dealings with associates.

NO REVENUE

B.C. Tel received no revenue last year and expects none for the next two from its Okanagan Telephone Co. subsidiary, the federal rate increase hearing was told earlier.

Company comptroller D. B. McNeil said under cross-examination on the second day of the hearing into proposed rate increases by B.C. Tel that the Okanagan company estimates losses for 1971 and 1972 at $255,000 and $662,000, respectively.

This will mean no revenue to B.C. Tel for those years, he said. The larger company bought 99.8-per-cent controlling stock in the Okanagan utility in 1966 for $13 million and also holds long-term notes worth $9.5 million.

PREVIOUS YEAR

Dividends paid by Okanagan Telephone declined in 1969 to $165,000 from $331,111 in the previous year.

Mr. McNeil also said that rate increases to B.C. Tel will not affect the estimated

Cutback If NATO 'Sincere'

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said today the Soviet Union is willing to reduce its armed forces in Europe if the NATO countries display a "sincere" position on bilateral withdrawals.

Kosygin said "the Soviet Union has displayed a new, important initiative — suggesting the start of negotiations on the reduction of armed forces" in Europe.

"We are ready for such reduction if, in fact, the NATO countries display a sincere position . . ."

NOT SATISFACTORY

Relations with the United States "cannot be called satisfactory," Kosygin said.

"In principle we desire better relations with the United States . . . at the same time we cannot draw a line between bilateral relations and the aggressive policies of the imperial circles in the United States, the barbarious actions in Indochina, contempt for other peoples and violation of their rights."

LITTLE DOUBT

Kosygin left little doubt about the Kremlin's position on mutual arms reduction in Europe. His full comment was:

"The Soviet Union displayed a new, important initiative in the interests of ensuring European security, having suggested a start in negotiations on the question of reducing arms and armed forces in central Europe.

"We are ready for such reductions if, certainly, the NATO countries indeed display a sincere position to the solution of this task which is so important for peace."

Ottawa's Price Fight 'Irrational, Bizarre'

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal methods of managing the national economy came under withering attack today from John F. Graham, president of the Canadian Economics Association.

Dr. Graham, head of economics and sociology at Dalhousie University, Halifax, attacked recent government attitudes towards price inflation and employment as irrational and bizarre.

Longer-run policies on poverty, the cities, housing and regional development have been failures, he said.

The economist, testifying at an inquiry into economic management before the Senate national finance committee, called for development of long-term planning.

He said policies need to sort out priorities between public good and private gain—between good television programs, for example, ahead of expensive color TV sets, or between lavish red-carpet airports and improved housing.

CAUSED UNEMPLOYMENT

In the most outspoken attack on recent government policies since the Senate inquiry opened almost six weeks ago—"I may have been rather too categorical," Dr. Graham said in an aside—the economist criticized the government's assault on inflation in 1969 and 1970 at the expense of jobs.

He charged that arguments used by Prime Minister Trudeau to defend government policies would not hold water.

"Although rapid inflation is a cause for concern, it is less serious than the unemployment generated by measures to combat it," he said.

"To be preoccupied with the plight of the housewife who faces increasing prices when she goes to buy groceries and to ignore the plight of the housewife whose husband has no pay cheque to buy groceries is irrational, to say the least . . .

"We now are in the strange position of having created unemployment to control inflation with the result that the quick elimination of unemployment is likely to generate even greater inflation than we would otherwise have had.

"To avoid this, we apparently must move back to full employment gradually over several years and pay the price of considerable unemployment and irretrievably-lost output when the country cries for things that need to be done."

Dr. Graham challenged the argument used by government spokesmen—most re-

THIS GINTER ALE JUST GOES 'POP'

Times News Services

PRINCE GEORGE—"Something special from Uncle Ben"—soft drinks—are the newest products to be marketed in British Columbia in a beer bottle with a tartan label.

Jim Condon, president of Nechako Beverages Ltd. of Prince George, says the drinks, which come in eight flavors including ginter (not ginger) ale, are popular.

He says the beer bottles, which have a 12-ounce capacity in comparison to the 10 ounces of most soft drink bottles, are a good marketing feature.

Both Condon and brewery owner Ben Ginter denied that the use of the Ginter name and the tartan made familiar by Uncle Ben's beer is an attempt to circumvent a ban on liquor advertising scheduled to come into effect in British Columbia Sept. 1.

Condon and Glen Melin are the principals of Uncle Ben Beverages Ltd., which will market the new line. Melin also is general manager of Ben Ginter Construction Ltd.

CONTROLS LIKELY ON CIGARETTE ADS

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister John Munro gave formal notice today of federal legislation to restrict the promotion and sale of cigarettes.

No details of the legislation will be made public until the bill is presented to the Commons, probably Thursday.

However, the bill is expected to limit or ban cigarette advertising on television and through other media and to require a health hazard warning on the package.

Provincial legislation has banned cigarette advertising in B.C. as of Sept. 1.

'Nothing to Fear' In Tax Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Tuesday night that worried corporation executives can breathe a little easier over next week's new tax legislation because "it is nothing to fear."

In a speech to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Trudeau tiptoed carefully through a broad outline of his thinking on relationships between economic and social issues without once getting into specifics of the June 18 budget proposals.

Mr. Trudeau conceded there had been "an uneasiness in the business community" over tax legislation, lack of federal policy on foreign investment and unfinished formulation of "an all-encompassing energy policy."

"The first of those areas of uncertainty will disappear with the introduction next week of new tax legislation," Mr. Trudeau told 1,000 persons at the CMA banquet.

"The legislation is not something to fear. The Canadian dream of a socially-conscious, developed economy cannot be attained without the presence of a healthy manufacturing industry.

"You, unquestionably, know this. The government, I assure you, knows this."

Loose Rock At Fraser Dam Site?

British Columbia Energy Board chairman Gordon Shrum said today it would be "premature" for him to discuss results of exploratory river drilling at the Moran Dam site on the Fraser.

Shrum said he could not confirm a report from drillers at the site, 130 miles northeast of Vancouver, indicating loose rock and gravel 250 feet deep. An engineer at the project said Tuesday the gravel could mean construction will be considerably more expensive.

Shrum said he has not received confirmation of the drilling results.

"I think that my judgment would have to be based on an engineering report, not on statements made by workers at the site," Shrum said.

He said the drilling is being done to determine the most suitable location for the Moran Dam. Results of one test site do not rule out other potential sites, Shrum said.

A full engineering report on the dam will be presented to the 1972 legislative session in February or March.

'QUIP' CATCHES UP TO NEW CMA HEAD

Sterilization of Lower Classes Advocated

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Quebec Bureau

Dr. H. D. Roberts, a 62-year-old Newfoundland general surgeon, explained that the large majority of persons submitting to voluntary sterilization at present are in the upper classes.

The result, he suggested, will be the eventual elimination of the classes which produce the better IQ children and provide generally better genetic material and a better rearing environment for their children.

He went on to say he thought that families on welfare, which he pictured as being generally much larger "should be made to practise birth control."

Earlier in the news conference he had referred to remarks by another unidentified individual who suggested that before a family goes on welfare, the man should have a vasectomy.

When asked specifically if he agreed with this philosophy Dr. Roberts said he didn't "disagree." But after the news conference he asked reporters to regard it as a "quip" — something that shouldn't be reported as coming from the president of the CMA, the 23,000-member national doctors' organization.

"What I am saying," he explained, during the news conference, "is that these are the families that are reproducing, have low IQs, very poor circumstances to bring up children (in), and they cannot produce the prominent citizens who will be the best calibre — that's what I'm trying to say."

In contrast to other forms of birth control and family planning, Dr. Roberts stressed that sterilization in both the male and female is "really doing-it finally."

He suggested he wouldn't object to sterilization if it were being used through the whole population. And he noted that through improved education the classes using sterilization will work down.

He also suggested a large proportion of the people in upper classes who are now obtaining sterilization "are using it as a method of contraception," when other methods are available.

N.Y. TRAFFIC MOVES AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking municipal employees returned to work today after city and union leaders agreed to a proposal for ending the two-day walkout that throttled traffic Monday and spread to sewage treatment plants, incinerators, parks, beaches and even school lunch deliveries Tuesday.

Key to the four-point proposal by the city's office of collective bargaining was that the union's controversial pension plan would be resubmitted to the state legislature next year.

Health Board 'Never Existed'

Greater Victoria's metro health board learned Tuesday that there's some question of whether it exists in law at all.

The board had written city solicitor T. P. O'Grady for his opinion on whether it was empowered to enter into a contract with the Greater Victoria school board for supply of health services.

Part of O'Grady's reply says: "I would respectfully confirm the advice that I have given on a number of occasions over the past several years when the same sort of problem has arisen. That advice has been that in my opinion the organization commonly known as the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health does not and never has existed as a Metropolitan Board of Health pressing for a contract which will detail services and their cost.

Health board members at Tuesday's meeting asked Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, to arrange a meeting requested by school district superintendent A. J. Longmore to discuss several aspects of the problem.

Whatever the board's status in law, members learned Tuesday there has been no progress in the months-long within the meaning of the 'Health Act.'"

AT ONE TIME

Victoria's solicitor said that at one time it might have been correct to describe the organization simply as the Metropolitan Health Committee but even that no longer applies with the lapsing of a 10-year-old memorandum.

". . . the only function that can properly be assigned to the 'Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health' is that of a consultative or advisory committee. Manifestly a group of that kind cannot contract with a school board or at all."

The school board, which has expressed dissatisfaction with the scope of health services it has been getting, has been struggle to change it by having it incorporated into the Capital regional board's operation.

An appointment with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark for Monday to consider the subject had to be cancelled by the regional board.

WHITBREAD BACKED

In other business board members endorsed Dr. Whitbread's suggestion that catering companies serving Greater Victoria in future be required to get a permit from the health board where they will be supplying food and drink for gatherings of over 100.

Whitbread said there had been "a few difficulties" and establishing such a permit system would enable health board staff to ensure food and drink were properly stored and handled, reducing the hazard of food poisoning.

Members also decided, in a split vote, to write the provincial government for clarification of responsibility in ensuring conditions of permits issued by the Pollution Control Branch are met.

Whitbread said there could be some question of whether health board staff or PCB should do the monitoring on permit conditions where public health is involved.

Some of the board members thought it would be better to leave the question untouched until a case in point arose.

RETIRED as a player after 18 seasons in the National Hockey League, Jean Beliveau today said he has accepted the position of vice-president in charge of public relations for the Canadiens.

Lake Facing Logging 'Ruin'

Four men who explored Tsusiat Lake on the west coast of Vancouver Island say it would be a real loss to British Columbians if the lake's watershed is logged.

"It's an oasis of serenity," said John Willows, leader of the group and an executive of the Victoria Sierra Club. "It's beautiful because it has not been touched by the hand of man."

Willows also said logging the watershed would ruin beautiful Tsusiat Falls facing the open Pacific on the west coast trail.

The flow of water would be reduced to a trickle during summer months and in winter, flooding caused by the heavy run-off, would damage the river, he explained.

THREE LAKES

Tsusiat is one of three lakes conservationists want included in Pacific Rim National Park which includes Long Beach, the Effingham Islands and the 50-mile long west coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

It is situated about six miles north of Nitinat Lake — a salt water inlet.

The outdoors men are believed to be the first to penetrate the lake by land via Hobition lake situated to the east.

An Indian trail once use to run from the sea coast to the lake, but it is now overgrown.

The party included Derek Reimer, a University of Victoria instructor in geography, Dietrich Bertz, Uvic librarian, and Dave Paine, a Grade 11 student.

The Victoria Canoe Club loaned the group canoes which they portaged from Hobiton to Tsusiat Lake.

Reimer said Tsusiat Lake and watershed is an ecological entity.

It's a natural area to include in the park," he said. "Once it is logged and roads constructed around it, it will become just another pond.

This is one of the last few large wilderness lakes left on southern Vancouver Island," he said.

Shadow Mischief

Cholera Epidemic Checked, Says India

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — A human floodtide of East Pakistani refugees in India today neared an estimated six million. Officials in the most-affected states, West Bengal, said a virulent cholera epidemic among refugees had been checked to some extent but conditions in refugee camps are worsening.

State Chief Minister Ajoy Kumar Mukherjee told reporters Tuesday of the abatement of the epidemic as officials put the death toll to date at 2,187.

But unofficial reports reaching the health ministry in Calcutta put the deaths at 4,000 — and this figure was only about half that given by diplomatic sources in Calcutta.

Health officials said there is no way of stopping cholera spreading throughout West Bengal during the coming monsoon months.

One official said: "We can't hope to get rid of it. The only thing we can do is try to contain it."

Mass inoculations of refugees in the big camps outside Calcutta are being carried out nonstop by medical teams.

FLOOD CONTINUES

The small outbreak of the disease within the city itself appears under control but conditions in the camps are getting worse as the refugee flood continues.

Officials said the Indian government planned to put up several new camps in West Bengal to accommodate 1.3 million refugees.

Mukherjee said the problem caused by the influx was colossal. Tens of thousands were living in the open because of a shortage of tarpaulins, and normal administrative work in the border regions had been disrupted by mounting pressure from the refugees.

Armed reserve police were called out to prevent rioting between near starving East Pakistanis and Indian residents at Barasat, only 15 miles north of Calcutta.

Barasat, an agricultural, jute and cotton weaving centre not far from Calcutta's Dum Dum International Airport, has a normal population around 90,000.

But more than 200,000 predominantly-Hindu refugees have poured into the town, camping in schools, official buildings and even breaking into Moslem mosques.

Though West Bengal is largely a Hindu state, the Moslems in Barasat reacted violently when their mosques were invaded.

The reserve police turned the refugees out of the mosques and private homes but allowed them to stay in schools and government buildings.

. . . B.C. TEL

revenues because the smaller utility is not included in the current application for increases in installation rates, certain long-distance and toll rates and other charges.

He said the Okanagan company falls under the jurisdiction of the provincial Public Utilities Board and not the Railway Transport Committee of the federal transport commission. An application to the provincial board for increased Okanagan rates will be made if the current application is approved.

PAID $900,000

He later said that B.C. Tel paid $900,000 for systems research in 1970 to General Telephone and Electronics Service Corp. — a fellow subsidiary of General Telephone. The company expects to pay $803,000 this year and $924,000 in 1972 for similar work.

But he said information as to the level of work provided and whether or not the service firm's charges were reasonable or competitive would have to come from subsequent company witnesses.

A major concern to those opposing the rate increases is whether or not B.C. Tel is paying competitive or fair prices to fellow Gentel subsidiaries from which it gets most of its equipment and services.

AD RATES HIGHER

G. F. MacFarlane, the company's vice-president for corporate development, said in a later presentation B.C. Tel has been paying higher advertising rates — some newspaper rates being up 25 to 40 per cent since 1966. Television outlets have increased their advertising rates by the same average amounts and one raised them 175 per cent during the period, he said.

B.C. Tel last had a general rate increase in 1959.

Under initial questioning by a lawyer for B.C. Tel, he said the company's purchasing policy "is set out to get the best technical solution in combination with economies."

The company's first consideration is to determine what equipment it can get for the lowest price and often finds that affiliate companies can provide what they want.

A program of standardizing equipment through purchasing from affiliates permits the company to move into common switching arrangements sooner and B.C. Tel saves some of its purchase costs by buying in bulk.

NOT SUITABLE

Equipment such as cable could not all be purchased overseas because only certain types are available for economic prices. Such things as office switchboards from Europe are not always suitable for customer requirements and cost more.

"Dealings with affiliates usually has advantages because you can get what you want at a better price. However, this is not always so," he said.

And in cases where the prices from affiliate and non-affiliate companies are the same, the company considers other factors such as ease and speed of delivery.

It is not always best to go to tender because that in itself can be expensive and the company must consider plant expansion and future flexibility in using what equipment it buys.

. . . PRICE FIGHT

cently by Prime Minister Trudeau in a Toronto speech Tuesday night — that if the price inflation had continued through 1970, Canada would have had even more severe unemployment today.

That argument has been virtually unsupported by facts, the economist said.

If it meant that inflation would have priced Canadian exports out of world markets, thereby costing jobs at home, the argument fails to acknowledge that prices in customer countries were raising even faster.

Further, the floating of the Canadian dollar's exchange rate since a year ago would have permitted adjustments that effectively reduced the prices of Canadian goods to foreign buyers, Dr. Graham pointed out.

"I am very concerned about the common practice of treating unemployment as though it were simply an economic variable to be balanced off against inflation, rather than seeing it from the degrading, humiliating, soul-destroying thing that it is.

"Moreover, although inflation imposes its costs, there is not even any evidence I know of that inflation at the rates we were experiencing were or would be damaging to output."

An alternative, he said, is to concentrate on full employment and organize built-in or frequent adjustments of old age pensions and welfare payments to offset price inflation for those on fixed incomes.

Diplomatic Trails Blazed By Peking-Bound Pepin

By NORMAN WEBSTER
Special to The Times

PEKING — An economic delegation headed by Trade Minister Jean Luc Pepin will arrive here late this month.

Pepin will be the first Canadian government figure to visit China while in office since the Communist takeover in 1949. Canada established diplomatic relations with The Peoples Republic last October.

His visit follows by a month that of Italy's minister of foreign trade, who signed a trade agreement with the Chinese before leaving.

Preceding the Pepin group will be a delegation from the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal, which enters China late this week. Bank of Montreal chairman G. Arnold Hart is one of those coming.

It should keep Canada's new ambassador, Ralph Collins, busy in his first few weeks. Collins entered China Saturday from Hong Kong and flew to Peking the same day to take charge of the embassy.

His is expected to present his credentials within a few days to Tung Pi-Wun vice-chairman of The Peoples Republic.

Peking was once Collins' home, he came here at the age of seven, leaving China when he was 12.

He was born 56 years ago in what is now Kunming, capital of the southwestern province of Yunan, on the border with Vietnam. His parents were in China working for the YMCA.

He returned in 1943 as third secretary at the Canadian embassy in Chungking — wartime capital of the Chiang Kai-Shek government. He left in 1946.

On arrival Saturday night Collins described his Mandarin as "rusty." Monday he was trying it out in stores and walking around downtown seeing the sights.

The ambassaror's wife and 18-year-old daughter are expected later this month. Two older children will stay in Canada.

Collins, most recently an assistant undersecretary of state for external affairs, inherits an embassy that is a going concern. It has 16 Canadians and 11 Chinese staff and seems well settled in.

Charge d'affair John Fraser met Collins at Peking airport, along with Ling Ching, a deputy director in the Chinese foreign ministry's western European, American and Australian department. Fraser is remaining on here as counsellor.

China's ambassador to Canada, Huang Hua, will not be appearing in Ottawa as soon as originally expected. He was to have left Peking last Thursday, but his departure has been put off until late June or early July.

WHAT TO SEE IN CHINA

By NORMAN WEBSTER
Special to the Times

PEKING—People, people, people—During your visit to China you will see them in their blue-clad millions. They are the builders of the new China, and while you are here you will want to see as much of them as you can, to try to understand what they are building.

But there will come a time when you have seen all you want to see of them, when you have been stared at by too many, when you want to get away and think a bit about the past. Then, if you are in Peking, you should go either to the Ming Tombs or the Old Summer Palace.

Thirteen Ming emperors are buried in splendid tombs in a valley outside Peking. You can visit the tomb of the Emperor Wan Li, the only one which has been excavated, or you can go to one of the smaller ones, and be in privacy with your thoughts, the magnificent Ming architecture and your picnic lunch.

You approach and leave the tombs along the Sacred Way, passing between 36 standing and keeling human and animal stone figures. This is where the body of a dead emperor once would pass. Today Chinese sightseers on their bicycles and peasants in their carts are kings of the Way.

Nearer in, just on the city's outskirts, is the Old Summer Palace, once one of the world's fabulous pleasure gardens. Under the Ching emperors it was a wonderland of palaces, pavilions and precious objects, small hills, water and marble bridges.

In 1860 the place was sacked by British and French troops. The most vaulable things were set aside for Queen Victoria and Napoleon III, then all was plundered and burned. Today almost everything save a few picturesque ruins is gone, and rice fields cover the site of the gardens. It is a good place to recite Ozymandias.

Plotter Escapes

ATHENS (AP) — Nicholas Zambelis, a 26-year-old taxi driver sentenced to an 18-year prison term for plotting to assassinate army-backed Premier George Papadopoulos, escaped from the Aegina Island jail, police sources said. He was convicted and sentenced three years ago.

To Deter Further Lunacy

THE BUGABOO OF OUR planet, that installations might be set up on the moon to launch nuclear missiles at any target on the earth's surface on command from earth, could be disposed of if the Soviet proposal to prevent such an operation is taken up by the United Nations. Prime Minister Trudeau was quick to pledge Canadian support for the proposed treaty, which in reality is a particular expression of the earlier understanding that outer space should not be used for military purposes.

The Russian announcement came just after Soviet astronauts boarded the space platform which now is orbiting the earth and proceeded with their planned program. An unarmed moon would not represent earthly security unless agreements for peace also included orbiting platforms which equally could carry nuclear weapons to be unleashed by signal from terrestrial headquarters. These presumably are covered by the treaty of 1967 banning mass destructive weapons in space.

But pursuing the same logic, nuclear submarines loaded with rocket missiles which seek out almost any target on land or sea can likewise invalidate the rocket platform weapons. The point is unavoidable: we shall not have global security without global nuclear disarmament.

But a start on the moon is not to be rejected, and the Soviet overture should be given every encouragement. Besides outlawing lunar military testing and operations, the proposed treaty would reserve the moon for peaceful uses by all states and it expressly calls for the prevention of "unfavorable change in and pollution of the lunar environment." The activities of any nation which puts men or equipment on the moon are not to be interfered with by any other country—indeed, moon-walkers will be obligated to assist other persons in distress on the moon's surface.

These concepts are theoretical in some respects today, but they could have very practical and necessary effects in the near future. Because of this, and the likelihood of other rapid extensions of man's activities into space, it is important that binding commitments be made, not only as necessary safeguards but also as valuable precedents for future developments. Judging by the slow progress of disarmament negotiations on earth, it is none too early to begin to prohibit military activities beyond ground level.

And right now the peoples of the world should resolve to disbelieve the incorrigibles who will try to persuade them that preparation for slaughter from the skies is necessary in order to beat the other fellow to it. We've been through all that down here.

Confessions from Confusion

THE EXTENT TO WHICH THE modern state, if it is so inclined, can leave its imprint on the minds of citizens through psychological terror has recently been demonstrated through the publication of the "confession" of the Cuban poet, Heberto Padilla. An excerpt from the document which was wrung from the poet at frightening cost was printed in the New York Times.

Part of the document reads as follows: "What I wanted was to call attention to myself, to profit from the scandal. I wanted to be the only writer with a political mind in Cuba, the only writer capable of confronting the revolutionary process and to impose my ideas. Hypocritically and contemptuously, I repeated the old theory that politics is too serious a matter to leave to the politicians."

It would be too simple and self-deluding to pass the Padilla confession over by saying that Cuba is in a particular phase of revolution characterized by repression, or that Padilla is simply co-operating with the state for his own good. Padilla's words only too clearly reflect the thoughts of a mind which has been ground down by subtle devices.

In theory, all progressive governments have separated the Church from the State. The tendency of governments to supplement their power by ideological imposition remains, however, as the legacy of an older time we hoped had been outgrown. The importance of self-respecting and self-supporting opposition to governmental domination has been brought home in a cruel but sobering manner.

A Wild Swing by the Birchers

IF THE PHILOSOPHY (IN THE loose use of the word) and the activities of the John Birch Society were not so well known, the society's current warning about the Communist conspiracy in Canada might cause some local indignation. Because the group's attitude is so widely understood, the response here should be nothing more serious than laughter.

Selected Victorians have been warned that Prime Minister Trudeau "with a known record more blatant than that of Fidel Castro" is moving rapidly and ruthlessly to make this country another Cuba. He is linked with former Prime Minister Lester Pearson as a partner in a conspiracy to convert Canada into a Communist state, and other leading Canadian public figures are similarly accused.

This places them in company with a multitude of liberally minded Americans, including presidents and ambassadors, whom the John Birchers have declared to be Communists and anti-patriots. Being attacked by the Birchers will not do Mr. Trudeau any harm. Considering the nature of the detractors, a knock from them is a boost.

Exploiting the Non-Exploitable

THE WORLD OF MUSIC MAY survive the failure of world heavyweight prize-fight champion Joe Frazier's singing from the stages of Europe. The crowds are just not pouring in to hear his vocal presentations. And a critic has pointed out, euphemistically, that "Joe is a better boxer than a singer" — a delicate understatement. Joe, as many who have seen him on television and out of the ring agree, has a voice more acceptable to a group singing around the piano at a relaxed family party.

But why exploit this non-talent when he achieves artistry with his fists — artistry and a reasonable degree of economic security?

High athletic ability and vocal distinction are not necessarily antithetic. A young Paul Robeson proved that. But Joe Frazier is not Robeson, though he's much better with his fists. Sophisticated non-attending musical buffs of Europe are telling Mr. Frazier and his promoters something. It used to be phrased: "Cobbler, stick to your last".

Dim Big Town

New York Times

A sharp warning that New York City "cannot hope to survive" without drastic economies in the use of electricity marks the study just completed by William K. Jones of the State Public Service Commission. It is by far the gloomiest of all the dismal analyses of the city's power crisis since the catastrophic blackout of November 1965.

The remedies considered necessary by Commissioner Jones to guard against further breakdown of disastrous dimensions are so drastic that they border on being disastrous in their own right.

It is impossible to believe, however, that the situation can only be met by adopting the most startling of all Mr. Jones' proposals; his recommendation that the P.S.C. order a total withholding of electricity for buildings started or rehabilitated after July 1.

It is plain that Mr. Jones is not urging candles or gaslight for skyscrapers erected after that date. In effect, he is proposing a suspension of all new building until Con Edison is assured of adequate energy to meet the needs of this city and lower Westchester County — a prospect not likely to be realized before 1975 at the earliest. The only exceptions to his no-power rule would be hospitals, schools and low-cost housing, and even these he is not sure he would exempt.

The ten million people who depend on Con Edison for light and power will find nothing much more encouraging in any of the other conclusions of Mr. Jones.

His recommendations could result in the periodic evacuation for whole days at a time of office buildings, factories and stores as an alternative to the deliberate blacking out of entire neighborhoods. Mr. Jones' main goal is to keep the subways running without interruption, but he does not exclude the danger of service reductions on a large-scale basis.

FROM EDMONTON

By JAMES H. GRAY

Union Rate Fetish Hampering Student Work

FOR Canadians who went through the Great Depression of the 1930s there was a familiar ring to the uproar here last week over the kind of jobs the summer-work-for-students program can provide. As happened 40 years ago, the work was barely started before it collided with the vested interests of people who earned union wages for somewhat similar work. For sheer nit-picking, however, the Depression veterans would have been hard put to match the edict promulgated by an Edmonton foreman. The debris to be removed during the big Mill Creek clean-up was limited to what could be picked up by hand. If it was not lying around loose and had to be dug up or raked up, it was a "no-no."

Gray

The foreman of the Mill Creek project, a permanent civic employee, relieved the job corpsmen of their tools with this explanation:

"They don't need shovels. Muscles will do. If they have to use shovels why shouldn't they get paid $3.10 an hour like other civic employees?"

The ecology workers are paid $250 a month by the Alberta government but work under the direction of civic employees on jobs selected by the city. They also get a living allowance which boosts their monthly income to from $295 to $345. The objective is to enable the students to earn enough money to help them through their next year at university.

Earn Less

The students, hence, earn a lot less than the $425 a month city of Edmonton laborers would be paid for doing pick and shovel work cleaning up the ravine. But without the jobs-for-students drive no work of this kind would be done. Proof of that is the fact that it has never been done before.

The un-tooling of the students took place just a day after another group of crew men were ordered off a tree-planting project. That, said the organizer of CUPE — the Canadian Union of Public Employees — was the kind of work done by union members at union rates of pay.

Neither the ravine clean-up nor the tree planting, however, would ever have been even contemplated without the impetus provided by money for make-work projects. Mill Creek ravine, over the years, has been a convenient dumping ground for all the trash Edmontonians living in the vicinity had for disposal. Much of the junk had been in the ravine so long it was deeply imbedded in the earth and could be removed only by pick and shovel.

Without picks and shovels, most of the wrecked cars, old bedsteads, old furniture, tires, shopping carts, etc., will remain anchored in the ravine. Without rakes the broken glass and trash cannot be gathered up and removed. So, with mounting anger, the students are fiddling around with surface effluvia which can be handled by hand.

Forty years ago Canada also embarked on make-work schemes for the unemployed. Then, too, work chosen for the work-for-relief projects ran afoul of opposition from people with regularly paid jobs doing similar work. So all kinds of construction work was disqualified, along with building cleaning, street maintenance, etc., so the unemployed were conscripted for such boondoggles as dandelion digging, leaf raking and dust collecting in back alleys.

Picks and Shovels

In those days there was no objection to the unemployed using picks, shovels and rakes. It was power machinery that was verboten to them. Thus in the Winnipeg woodyard the unemployed were required to saw up cordwood with hand saws while the circular saws stood idle in the corner of the yard.

Nobody worried about the ecology in those days, but a lot of cleaning up and debris removing was also done during the depression. In fact it was about all that was done. As soon as any useful work was suggested the people who got paid for doing it rose in anger. The difference today is that they now have union officials who are ever on the alert to circumscribe the activities of the beneficiaries of make-work projects.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Tow-Away Protest

Would you be good enough to bring to the attention of your readers the existence of the nefarious practise of tow trucks removing cars from private parking lots supposedly in accordance with the law.

Although it cannot be proved, it would appear that the valid parking ticket is removed from the car by some person or persons unknown prior to the tow truck coming on the scene and the unfortunate driver then must go to the towing company's lot and redeem his car for cash.

This practice is very prevalent on the weekends yet the police are powerless to put a stop to it because of the lack of concrete evidence. Accordingly, I have placed an advertisement in your paper requesting that if anyone has any information regarding this practice please contact me at 384-6966 so that some action can be taken. — E. J. Hubbard, Esquimalt.

Dominion Day

May I respectfully draw to attention a continuing source of disappointment to many Canadians.

Last year, a bill to change the name Dominion Day was introduced in Parliament. Many individuals and many organizations responded vigorously by circulating petitions and urging their Members of Parliament to reject this bill. We were relieved when our efforts were seemingly successful and the proposed legislation defeated.

The name Dominion Day represents Biblical and historical feelings which cannot be called up by the use of any other name. For over 100 years it has been a visible part of our nation, and if it is removed, Canada will be the poorer for it. We have an obligation to pass on to succeeding generations, our heritage, still intact.

The Prime Minister's plans to celebrate Dominion Day did not once mention the legal name by which all elected predecessors called our holiday. We do not wish to believe that the Prime Minister is systematically removing one of our proud symbols, by design. We fervently hope that this was an unpremeditated oversight and that the legal name Dominion Day will be used proudly in the present and future, as in the past by all loyal Canadians. — Jean Smith, Thornhill, Ont., (on behalf of the Women's Canadian Historical Society.)

Real Fighter

Every Sunday we drive along Munn Road, and see the white house that stands alone among the wreckage of the district caused by B.C. Hydro. I am proud to know that there stands a monument to a real fighter.

We followed his fight in your paper for over a year, at times thought odds were too big for one man without any organization supporting him to beat.

Now he has proved what one can do, when he fights for justice and democracy. It gives me hope for the future.

British Examples

The pollution of our rivers and lakes seems to be more acute than ever. Yet not enough is being done to rectify the situation. The trouble seems to be there are too many authorities, each controlled by local politics.

Now that is nothing unique. Both Scotland and England have the same problems. But two rivers the Clyde and Thames are controlled by "The Clyde Trust" and "Thames Authority" respectively. The rivers in question now report a return of salmon and other fish. The Clyde Trust ran the sewage over an electric, heated grid, the dried material being automatically put through rollers and loaded into sacks and sold to farmers and others as fertilizer. The electric power came from dynamos run by steam from boilers heated by burning flammable garbage. That was in 1913.

The River Thames flows through an area having a population greater than that of B.C., yet they managed to clean it up. Why cannot we in Canada set an example to the world by adopting some ideas from Europe instead of from the U.S.A.? — H. A. MacLeod, 9488 Lockside Drive.

Time to Grow Up

Just how small-minded can some people be? I am so tired of the carping criticism of Britain and the U.S.A. The London bus and other British things are a tourist attraction and Victoria does not spend tourist money.

The recent parade in our city was rather a sad spectacle saved from utter disaster by the entries from across the border. These people worked hard at various jobs in order to raise funds and came to join in our celebrations at their own expense. How very charming and gracious they must think we are.

It is right to develop a national character, but the way we are going it will not be a very nice one!

It is time for us to grow up and get rid of our inferiority complex which is the root of all this "anti" business. —D.L.C.

Silent Sufferer

Congratulations to Elizabeth Forbes for her article "Europe operators can't exploit aged," and Hon. J. J. Greene for his fighting speech in Calgary on the subject of taxes.

It is so true that it is only in North America that the misery of the aged is exploited and the tragedy is that, in most of these cases, these are the people who pioneered our nation.

It is about time that we, the people, should hear the real facts about taxation and Mr. Greene should be congratulated on releasing the fact that 70 per cent of taxes are borne by people with incomes of less than $7,000. One always hears the cries of the already entrenched about the Benson White Paper on taxation but the little man, on an income of less than $7,000, is seldom heard as of course he cannot afford batteries of high-paid lawyers to fight his case and so he remains and will continue to remain the silent sufferer unless his case is brought to public notice by men such as Mr. Greene.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of June 9, 1911:

One of the largest shipments of fruit and vegetables to be brought from San Francisco for some time was discharged from the Pacific Coast steamship Queen, Capt. George Zeh, at the outer wharf this morning. To this liner belongs the distinction this year of bringing the first consignment of peaches to Victoria. Only about a hundred crates were unloaded here, so the city will not be stocked for long with them.

Trudeau a Loser? It's a Possibility

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — For the first time since he burst onto the national political scene in 1968, it is possible to believe that Pierre Trudeau may not win the next general election.

Once he could do no wrong. Now he can do little right. Events conspire against his policies, and a public which once would forgive him anything now grudges him the benefit of every doubt.

The stress of adversity weakens the fabric of his cabinet and saps the morale of his party. His popularity is sinking and there is a political restlessness in the land which disturbs even the most complacent Liberal and quickens the most sluggish opponent. His government grinds too painfully slowly to satisfy even the patient.

Media Venomous

Young people who were once his keenest fans, in the orange colors of the Action Trudeau movement, now says, "He's blah." On the Ottawa cocktail circuit, instead of gushing matrons there are acid comments: "He's just a rather nasty little man."

The media which used to be accused of being sycophantic are now venomous, and in the parliamentary Press Gallery it is fashionable to be thoroughly turned-off by the PM: "He's so dishonest it's disgusting," or "He even looks greasy in his pictures."

The national euphoria which followed the October crisis, and elevated Trudeau to the heights of popularity, has evaporated, to be replaced by doubt and cynicism.

The government's economic policies are said not merely to be wrong, but deliberately cruel — as if any politician would court the unpopularity of unemployment.

Blamed for Economy

The critics who two years ago were concerned only with inflation now dismiss that as unimportant, the lesser of evils, and supplanted by unemployment.

Our econonic problems may be a puzzle within a conundrum which divides the experts at home and confounds all our friends abroad, but it is still easier to blame Trudeau for not finding a simple solution.

The prime minister travels to Russia on an adventure in diplomacy which might, in other and happier times, have been hailed as a personal triumph. He opens for Canada an opportunity to play a larger role in the world and to operate a more independent foreign policy.

He comes home to find that those who used to accuse him of being a continentalist or, worse, an isolationist, now fear that he blundered too far beyond our traditional interests. And those who used to say he was a tool of Washington now allege that he has sold out to the Kremlin.

The Ukrainians and their ethnic allies are outraged and it is harder to decide which is sillier, Trudeau's careless comment comparing Ukrainian nationalists to the FLQ, or the very idea that a Canadian prime minister, or any other head of government, visiting the Soviet Union should be expected to harangue his hosts about the treatment of their minorities.

It is, of course, always easy for politicians to posture on behalf of ethnic voters.

Some do it all the time, cynically playing to the gullible in the full knowedge that they can do nothing for the unfortunate minority groups imprisoned by communism. But if the intention is really to influence the Kremlin and perhaps to win a small concession here or there, it is usually better to be polite in public and persuasive in private.

STANFIELD

But Trudeau is now the villain for all seasons, the leader who has failed every expectation. The least surprised man, probably, is Mr. Trudeau himself. He recognized even during the hysteria of the 1968 election campaign the danger of the contradiction between his style and his substance.

His style persuaded millions of Canadians that he was a new man with new attitudes for a new age of politics, a leader for whom everything was possible.

He insisted in his speeches — but who was paying attention? — that he had no magic solutions, no miracles to work, no detailed promises he felt able to make.

He was right of course, and the voters were wrong.

So now, in disappointment and dismay, they feel cheated and angry. Unreasonable expectations turn to unreasoning resentment.

Down the polls slides Trudeau. He loses the by-election in Ontario and can't gain enough votes to win in Nova Scotia. The Liberals hold the two seats in Quebec, but there is a sour and unenthusiastic flavor to the victories.

One minister, Eric Kierans, has gone to add an influential voice to the chorus of economic critics. One backbencher went over to the Tories, and now another, Phil Givens, sees better prospects in Ontario politics. A defeated rival for the Liberal leadership, Paul Hellyer, senses after brooding for two years that there is disgruntlement in the country to be organized and turned against Trudeau.

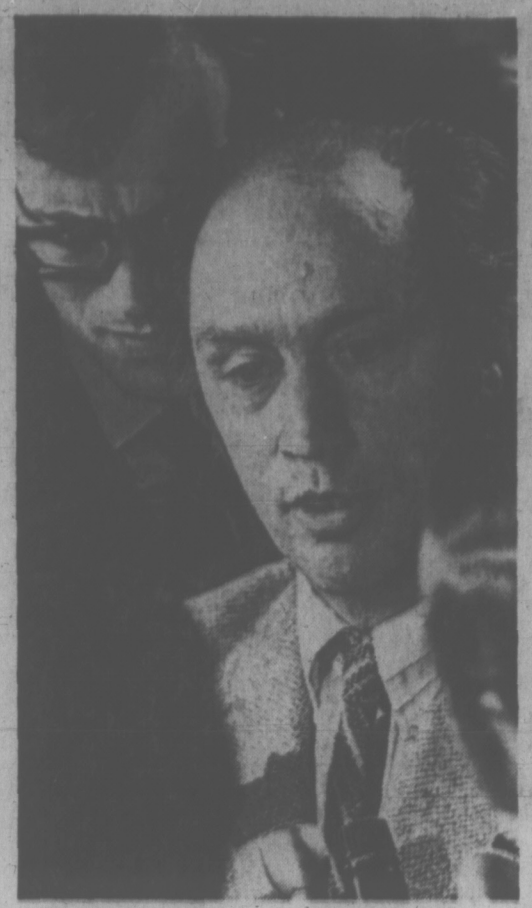
Who'll Beat Him?

It is a catalogue of trouble for Trudeau, and it is difficult to see much improvement in the future. The economy refuses to expand, tax reform, however modified, is unlikely to win much applause. The coming constitutional conference will do well to avoid failure, and Premier Robert Bourassa is giving small help to Ottawa's policies toward Quebec.

So, adding it all up, it is possible — the Ottawa formmakers put it no higher than possible — to think of Trudeau as a political loser.

But it is far harder to visualize anyone else beating him in the election.

Not Robert Stanfield. He is



He saw it coming

improving his personal standing in the country; some of the private wit and warmth are coming through in public. And he is an effective critic of the government in and out of Parliament.

But Stanfield remains stuck low on the opinion poll, and members of his own party grumble about his leadership.

The truth may be that it is the Conservative party and not its leader which is at fault. The voters perhaps sense that there is no Tory team, no substantial group of potential ministers around Stanfield, on the front bench or in the ridings. They may admire Stanfield for his personal qualities — as they should — but he stands alone.

Is David Lewis, the new leader of the NDP, the man to beat Trudeau? Hardly. He designs not to win the next election, but to come second, as the official opposition.

Hellyer's Action Canada is more a guerrilla force than an army in politics. It seems to be aimed at dislodging Trudeau and his gang of usurpers from the Liberal leadership, to prepare for the return of the right king — Paul the First.

It remains true also that Trudeau and the Liberals are the only truly national party, with substantial prospects of success in all regions. The fact was underlined in the recent byelections. In Nova Scotia, it was Liberal against Tory; in Quebec, Liberal against Social Credit and Liberal against semi-separatist; in Ontario, Liberal against NDP.

Return to Chaos

That will be a powerful argument when the general election comes. But not powerful enough perhaps to carry Trudeau over disillusion and disenchantment to clear victory.

On present form, the best Trudeau can look for, probably, is a minority government — and a return to the chaotic politics from which he was supposed to rescue Canada.

Commerce, Horseplay And Puffed-Up Charity

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

It's heartening, in a way, to see all those elderly gentlemen in silk pantaloons and fake fezzes marching about the lobby of the Hotel Vancouver, banging away on their drums waving cardboard scimitars, and generally stirring the lounge lizards out of their mid-afternoon naps.

There's a touch of phoney Grey Cup enthusiasm on a dull day in June and the spectators seem mildly amused to discover that men will be boys, Babbitt remains alive and the small-town businessman yields to untold fantasies when afforded the protection of his group.

There's a faintly obsolescent air to the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine once it ventures beyond the secret mumbo-jumbo of its clan meetings and comes out into the open air for these aging fraternity boy conventions.

It's a scene out of an old newsreel, a touch of the Forties given us in flash-back. The cute little green scooters are lined up in the hotel driveway. The vintage fire engine clanks down Burrard, the bankers and insurance salesmen in funny costumes hanging on like Harold Lloyd in a silent film.

The poor wives, outpeacocked and tired of the old jokes, sit in the coffee shop and discuss shopping. The elevators are filled with grown men wearing pancake makeup and Halloween outfits adapted from Rudolph Valentino.

The Second World War was fought, one heavy thinker once said, for the right to go to Lodge on Tuesday night.

The Shriners rank as the elite of all, one supposes, fun boys who get more ink than the Elk, Moose, Rotary, Kinsmen and all those others who can't stand their wives seven nights a week.

For one thing, you have to pass through the 32nd degree of Masonic lodge before you can qualify as a Shriner on this continent. (The Grand Lodge of England, mother lodge of world Masonry, threatens with expulsion any English Mason who enters the Shrine, which is considered vulgar and banal.) It was because the American Masonic lodges were traditionally dry that a group of 13 Masons in 1870 organized a fun and drinking society. Two men, one a physician and the other the Jack Benny of his day, concocted a caricature of the Moslem religion, the Mystic Shrine, for the amusement of U.S. Masons.

The Shrine to this day has had trouble living down its early credentials as little more than a diversion to allow the boys to cut up on convention out of town away from the missus.

I sit up in the plush Renaissance Suite, talking to Imperial Potentate Aubrey G. Gasham, a large, drawling gentleman who is postmaster of Norfolk, Virginia, and exalted leader of 900,000 world Shriners. A quartet of high-ranking wizards and mystic caliphs attends him.

A public relations officer sits close by. The Imperial Potentate is rather defensive, any probing question tending to set off, as if tape-recorded, a torrent of figures on the Shrine's hospitals. It is somewhat like touching an automatic valve on the band's famous steam calliope.

He is a teetotaller, he emphasizes. Jack Streight, a pleasant New Westminster lawyer, calms the air. He is Imperial High Priest and Prophet of the Imperial Council and in 1974 will become Imperial Potentate.

There are few professional men in the Shrine. It is thoroughly WASP middle-class businessmen. Walking the streets yesterday in their draughty pantaloons, they invariably wore those glasses that are half-horn-rimmed above, rimless below, the evidence of men who can't quite make up their minds what they are.

W. A. C. Bennett is a Shriner. Waldo Skillings is a Shriner. Les Peterson is in there, Wesley Black, Ray Williston. So is John Wayne. (Seven other Socreds are Masons.)

Envy of the Catholic network of hospitals was one of the reasons why the Shrine started its own hospital projects in 1920 after 50 years of fun, games and "camel's milk." The fun lodge rehabilitated its reputation. No one cares to criticize an organization that helps crippled children.

Since Negroes could not qualify for membership, they set up their own Ancient Egyptian Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Heaven knows why.

In 1962, as Saskatchewan doctors went on strike, the Shriners held their world convention in Toronto. In the fun, six died of heart attacks before O. Carlyle Brock, Imperial Chief Rabban of Zem Zem Temple of Erie, Pa., the third-ranking Shriner of all, announced: "The Saskatchewan government is an accomplice in a Communist plot to overthrow the West . . . Saskatchewan's socialized medicine is inspired and backed by Communist propaganda."

It is no accident that the Shrine's extensive medical philanthropy exists in the last advanced country in the world to institute a proper system of universal medical insurance. The Shrine hospitals are not all that highly regarded in the medical world.

Would not all that effort and fund-raising be of more benefit if channelled into established medical facilities?

It is somewhat like the corporations which "lend" their executives to the Community Chest drives, therefore just delaying the day when the government will be forced to provide proper support for the welfare agencies.

The little bands of Shriners march down Hornby, banging their drums. The small businessman is actually the loneliest person on earth, his only obsession his business. He needs the protective coloration of his kind. He needs his clubs.

The philanthropy is there, but rather too much is made of it. A hundred years of commerce and horseplay are not yet obviated. There are rather too many brochures, pamphlets and press releases pushed on the extent of the good works.

If they're done, they're done. Are public relations officers necessary? Do you have to advertise your charity?

It is somewhat like the fraternities which desperately try for publicity for their charity balls to wipe out the memory of the beer busts and the degrees in business management.

The wizards and caliphs in baggy pants toot their flutes in the hotel lobby. Beneath those tarbooshes and fake beards lurks a guilt complex.

LOGGING CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

By TED BLACHAR
The Globe and Mail

At any social gathering there's always a corner where save-the-wilderness types are expounding on how to cure our dirty world and preserve our natural heritage.

"Oh, you're from northern Ontario," they say. "You fish and hunt, what do you think of allowing lumber companies to cut timber in our parks?"

The shocked, unbelieving, you-traitor-you looks begin when I say I think the logging operations should be expanded, as long as they are strictly controlled.

The fact that most of my inquisitors have never seen an "unspoiled" forest is evident in their questions.

A deep spruce forest is dead. No bright flowers or pretty birds or playful animals, only dark piles of rotting needles lying under the trees that cut off sunshine to the earth.

It is only in the second growth areas — those created by forest fire or by logging — where the forest becomes alive. (Nature's cure for an overcrowded forest is a lightning bolt and a purging fire.) Here is the beauty of the moose and deer, squirrels and outdoors. Here is the home of foxes, partridge and songbirds.

It is because I love the outdoors and spend as much time as I possibly can fishing and hunting or just walking there that I am concerned for the health and preservation of our woods.

Years back we set aside areas to be inviolate, where axe and gun would never sound. But the unpleasant sight of parasites sweeping through herds of protected animals brought a change in thinking, and many so-called game preserves were opened to hunters on a limited, controlled basis — buffalo in Alberta and moose in northwestern Ontario — and, lo and behold, the herds did not perish but thrived.

And now, full circle, the voices say we should let our forests be unspoiled, once more we should let our animals eat themselves out of house and home, crowd themselves out of range ground so that Mother Nature will step in with disease and parasite to restore a balance.

Personally, I'd rather see logging and hunting or, as zoologist Ian McTaggart-Cowan, brother of the man in charge of cleaning up the Arrow oil spill, suggested recently: Let forest fires burn in our parks. Don't spend millions fighting fires when all that is threatened is wilderness. The wilderness will come back, healthier than it was when it was destroyed.

It's about time somebody said it.

Small Terrors in the Night

By ART STOTT

In the still watches of the night, when the restaurant lasagne you ate with a little too much chianti grows militant in your abdomen and breaks your sleep, you can understand what Shakespeare meant by "saucy doubts and fears." These are the black hours of early morning, when the physical being lies in a state closest to death and the half-awake spirit is grey.

The sins of commission and omission rise to confront you, swollen monstrous and hideous. Self-doubt becomes the fear that snuffle-snuffles in the dark. You may not be able to identify the "gross mistake you have made, but you know you're going to be found out.

Before you can summon will and strength enough to go to the kitchen for a cup of tea, or a glass of bicarb, you gain some insight into purgatory.

In addition to the conventional horrors which plague the dyspepsically aroused, a new djinn has arisen to haunt me.

Some of my relatively sane waking hours these days are devoted to work on a committee which arranges a series of lectures during the year. It is part of my task to write letters to prospective speakers. Some I do not know. And on occasion the invitation is sent out to a name and an address taken from a telephone directory.

This, it seems to me, is a reasonable enough procedure. If a mistake is made and the wrong person receives the letter, common courtesy and common sense should persuade the recipient to return it to me, with the information that I have addressed it in error.

But—

In the nightmarish fantasy which paralyses me in lasagne-induced wakefulness, the letter is delivered not only to the wrong man, but to a complete nut who happens to have an outlandish phobia centred on the topic outlined for the address. He seizes upon it as a heaven-sent opportunity to get off his chest all the inanities he harbors on the subject.

The night of the lecture rolls around. The rest of the audience and I believe we are assembled to hear the person to whom I thought the invitiation was addressed. Up stands the nut at the podium and delivers an outburst that makes a Uvic valedictory address sound like the platitudes of a vicar's tea party.

I shrivel. I am stoned out of the organization.

And yet how marvellously hilarious an address such a mistake could produce.

At least once in every newspaperman's life some comparable mistake in identity occurs and a person with the same name as another appears in print in the wrong context. The experience is mortifying, the mistake unpardonable.

I still suffer a recurrent ague when I think of a mix-up in pictures in which I was involved. We had done a workmanlike job building up a feature on a lady of dignity, charm, restraint and intelligence, making amends for a pressure play we had been forced to use to score a news break. The typescript was all that it should have been. As a bonus, we ran a deep, two-column picture with it.

By sheer mischance, the lady had exactly the same name as a merry swinger, an uninhibited person operating in a different circle entirely from the subject of the piece. The pixies were against us when the story went to press. The swinger's portrait illustrated the feature.

On another day, I had written lines for a sport's page picture of an English Cup final team, exuberant with victory. At the same time the Anglican synod was in session. When the paper came out, the sober faces of clerics gazed out from the sport's page. The football team, grinning from the church page, looked no more appropriately sited.

To these unseemly errors, time has lent a cloak of humor. They do not disturb me when I waken in the still watches of the night. Instead, I have the shuddering fear of having invited the wrong person to speak publicly in the wrong place.

Obviously, I must switch from restaurant lasagne and a drop too much chianti for an evening meal.

A Push-Button World In the Banking Business

By DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK — Banking, once a face-to-face meeting with the neighborhood banker or his employees, has gone push-button.

While some customers rue this latest phase of dehumanization, most of them welcome the computers, the television cameras, the buttons and the pneumatic tubes that speed transactions and eliminate long waiting lines.

A cross-country check among the United States' 14,000 full service banks shows just how far they've come since the days when new technology meant a new rubber stamp or a better-quality quill pen.

In Buffalo, for example, customers of the Marine Midland Bank-Western can play a money machine any hour of the day or night. All they need do is insert a special individual card into the slot of an apparatus mounted outside the bank, punch out an identification, set the dial for $25 or $50 and wait for the money to kick through the slot.

Television drive in banking is a feature at the Huntington National Bank's North Columbus branch in Ohio. The customer eases his car up to a window, talks to a picture on the TV screen and then uses buttons to make deposits or cash cheques.

The Continental Bank in Philadelphia has a secret-number gimmick. Your money comes through without a struggle at any of its 50 branches if the secret number you give matches up with a report from a button-operated machine.

In Chicago, computers at Beverly Bank give the customer one comprehensive monthly statement listing chequing and savings balances, instalment loan and mortgage figures.

In Baltimore, Equitable Trust has a large automated scoreboard hung on one wall. Customers take a numbered card, just like at some shops, then sit in a lounge, sipping free coffee and reading magazines, until the board calls them in a burst of flashing lights.

Surety National Bank of Los Angeles won't say its money is untouched by human hands but that's virtually the case. Its bank in the Civic Centre consists largely of buttons, microphones, electronic cash drawers and the like. Anyone wanting to bank presses a button, talks with a female face showing on a television screen and waits briefly until the infernal machine cranks out instructions. When that happens, and only then, cash drawers are opened or loan applications processed.

At Chase Manhattan in New York, and many other banks, people can use automatic cheque depositors. They feed the cheque and deposit slip into the machine and the whole thing gets added to their accounts without the bother of standing in line.

In St. Paul, an on-line computer eliminates the need for tellers to check out a savings balance at First National Bank. In Macon, Ga., customers at First National Bank and Trust can pay up to 40 separate monthly bills by filling in one super-cheque which saves time and postage.

The Bank of Delaware in Wilmington has a talking computer. The girl behind the counter picks up a special telephone to check out a customer. The computer, which can speak 64 words, does the checking and okaying of the customer. All the clerk does is push buttons.

In the bittersweet words of Raymond True, a depositor at Surety National in Los Angeles:

"The old banking bedside manner got lost along the way, which is too bad. But it's a pleasure to do away with all the fiddling and standing in line."

RCAF Arms In Cache?

LONDON (CP) — Police, in a massive swoop, have uncovered a huge arms cache near the Ascot race track and published reports suggest the weapons were surplus RCAF equipment destined for clandestine operations in Northern Ireland.

Ascot is in the London commuter belt about 30 miles west of here. Next week it will be crowded with thousands of spectators including the Queen at the opening of the Royal Ascot racing week.

Police declined to disclose full information on the raid except that the search took place Tuesday and that firearms and components were found.

However, the London Evening News, in a headline report, said the weapons, found about one mile from Ascot, included some 300 machine-guns. It said the weapons were 10 years old and were surplus RCAF equipment, all well greased and in perfect working order.

SEEK IRISH EXTREMISTS

A Canada House spokesman, asked for comment on the story, said he had no information and that as far as he knew British police had not been in touch with Canada on the matter.

The paper said that Irish extremists operating in Britain are being sought by police.

It said 60 detectives, using dogs, moved into the wealthy Ascot stockbroker area and swooped on a warehouse, a nursing home and private homes. They found the weapons in a building in a wooded area.

In Ottawa, a defence department spokesman said the department never sells arms. Any surplus equipment is turned over to the Crown Assets Disposal Corp., for disposal, but in many cases there is simply a paper transaction and the equipment remains in defence stockpiles.

If the equipment was Canadian Forces surplus, and the spokesman said he was unaware whether it was, it could possibly have been stolen.

"There are very stringent restriction on just who buys arms through the Crown corporation. They don't sell to just anybody."

Inuvik Road Contract Let

OTTAWA (CP) — A $3,919,446 contract for clearing and drainage of a 33-mile stretch of a highway from Inuvik to the Yukon was awarded to Cattermole-Tretheway Contractors Ltd. of Vancouver, the department of public works announced today.

The work will be near Inuvik, N.W.T., end of the all-weather road from Dawson, Yukon.

The entire route is to be completed in 1974.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

All commodities were on a buoyant price pattern.

Flax had moderate trading on steady prices.

Oats and barley were fractionally higher in light trade.

Scientists Idle

PALO ALTO, Calif (AP) — U.S. defence and aerospace spending cuts have thrown at least 30,000 scientists and engineers out of work, causing a "decaying technological superiority of the United States among developed nations of the world," New Study concludes. The Stanford Research Institute report, released Monday, calls for a federal program to ensure that they retain their skills and are reoriented into jobs.

Assassination Shakes Chile

Edmundo Perez Zujovic, who as interior minister was No. 2 man in President Eduardo Frei's Christian Democratic administration, was ambushed Tuesday by three young men who police said were believed to be members of an ultra-left extremist organization.

Dictator-Cerro

Agreement has been signed between Dictator Mines Ltd. and Cerro Mining Co. of Canada Ltd. for a large scale development program on Dictator's Stikine River molybdenite property.

Cerro is committed to spend $75,000 by the end of this year, and for an 80 per cent interest in the property, a total expenditure of just over $1 million in six years, and to put the property into production in nine years.

Diamond drilling is expected to start within the first three weeks of July.

Beaumont

Beaumont Resources Ltd. will put crews to work soil sampling and detail prospecting on 62 claims in Hackett River area, 300 miles northeast of Yellowknife, near Bathurst Inlet.

The summer program could also include follow-up work, dependent on preliminary results in the area, which is staked by Cominco, Hogan Mines, Nickel Hill, Bathurst-Norse Mines, Benson and other mining companies.

Fortune

Additional financing for plans to increase production at its Bob and Jim property near Parker, Ariz., has been negotiated by Fortune Channel Mines Ltd. The Vancouver company said the copper leaching process can be speeded up by 48 hours per cycle, increasing mine throughput.

Three exploration projects planned this season include follow-up at the Smith option 25 miles southeast of Smithers, soil sampling on Racing River-Churchill Peaks property in a joint venture with Beaumont Resources Ltd., and a $90,000 sampling, prospecting, mapping and geophysical survey program for 50 claims near Duckling Creek, 100 miles north of Fort St. James.

Great Pacific Purchases Atlas Leasing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Great Pacific Industries Ltd. has purchased for cash the Toronto-based Atlas Auto Leasing Ltd. from John H. Addison, owner of a number of automotive companies.

Announcement of the transaction was made in Vancouver by William J. Sleeman, president of Great Pacific. Formal agreement is expected to be effected June 25.

Great Pacific will operate Atlas Auto Leasing under its lease division, Jim Pattison Lease - Rentals. Purchase includes service and body shop facilities in Toronto and in excess of $1.5 million in lease vehicles.

Sleeman said the purchase increased GPI's fleet to 2,300 units with 40 per cent now in Eastern Canada.

The purchase is expected to add $1 million in revenue to the company's 1970 total of $7.3 million, he said.

Tool Export Bid Approved

FRASER, Mich. (AP) — The Cross Co., a suburban Detroit maker of manufacturing systems, has announced it has received government approval to export $31 million worth of Transfer-Matic automated machine tools to the Soviet Union.

Approval of the sale is part of a recently announced government policy to allow freer export of high-technology goods to Communist nations.

Ralph E. Cross, president of the firm, said the company has firm orders for $5 million worth of machines in the Soviet Union and is negotiating additional orders. The company also said it will apply within the next few weeks for licences to sell equipment for a new truck plant in the Soviet Union.

Algeria Buys Bata Subsidiary

ALGIERS (Reuter) — The Agerian State Shoe Co. has bought 51 per cent of Bata-Aaleris, a subsidiary of the Canadian-owned Bata Co., under an agreement signed here.

The official Algerian News Service said Bata would provide the Algerian company with technical assistance in order to increase production.

Craigmont

Net earnings of Craigmont Mines Ltd. of Vancouver dropped sharply for the six months to April 30.

Earnings were $1.6 million or 32 cents a share, compared to $3.59 million or 70 cents a share for the similar period last year.

The company said the average price of copper in February-April this year was 50 cents a pound, down 19 cents from a year ago.

Silverwood

Earnings on A and B shares in the 12 weeks to March 28 amounted for Silverwood Industries Ltd. to 16.1 cents vs. 14.3 cents in the period last year.

Sales rose about 5 per cent to $34.18 million. Extraordinary items were not included in the profit figures.

Can. Packers

The increase in dollar sales for the year ended March 27 was almost fully offset by decline in net profit, on a percentage basis, reports Canada Packers Ltd.

Sales amounted to just over $919 million, up 4.6 per cent from $878.97 million, while profit dropped 4 per cent from $9.99 million to $9.58 million, due mostly to final quarter decline in packing-house business.

The company also has unusually high capital expenditures, amounting to $16.88 million including acquisitions and additions to plants.

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was up 3-32 at $1.01 27-32. Pound sterling was up ¼ at $2.46 7-16.

NEW YORK (CP)—The Canadian dollar was down 5-16 at 98 11-64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was up 1-32 at $2.47 61-64.

Equipment Sales Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sales of farm and industrial equipment in Canada should improve by at least 7 per cent during 1971, the fourth annual convention of the Canadian Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute was told.

C. J. Munro, a sales executive for International Harvester of Canada, said in an "outlook for '71" report that sales of farm equipment are running some 15 per cent ahead of last year.

He said Saskatchewan sales are up 51 per cent and Alberta is up 28 per cent.

Munro said a four-year downtrend on tractor sales is expected to be reversed this year. He predicted 1971 tractor sales of 19,500 units, an 8 per cent increase over 1970.

Munro said the long-term outlook for the farm equipment industry remains clouded, but the short-term 1971 forecast "is the most optimistic for some time."

Surety Doors Closed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Acting on a request from the British Columbia Securities Commission, the Supreme Court of B.C. Tuesday appointed Martin Linsley as receiver-manager of Surety Investments Ltd.

The company ceased doing business Monday after receivering notice from superintendent of brokers, William Irwin, that its licence as a broker dealer had not been renewed.

John Luttin, president of Surety Investments, said securities and money held for the accounts of clients "will all be delivered by the receiver."

He added: "It is too bad to see a business go like this. It just got top heavy."

Linsley said he had not had time to appraise the situation.

Surety Investments was organized in 1959 and has been in business since that time. For the last four years it has occupied handsomely-furnished premises covering the whole ground floor of the Prescott Building on Howe Street. Luttin said the rent is $1,700 a month.

WAS IN LUMBER

Prior to forming the company, Luttin was in the lumber business. He came to B.C. in 1939 from Switzerland.

Mining companies promoted and underwitten in recent years by Surety are West Coast Resources Ltd., Bornite Ridge Mines Ltd. and Boraway Mines Ltd.

"These companies and their properties are all in good standing," said Luttin, who is president of all three.

BIG WHEELER was used recently to transport a 196-ton transformer from Esker, Que., to the Churchill Falls power project. It has two six-wheel tractors — one front and one back — and uses 15 gallons of diesel fuel to the mile. The 114-mile trip took three days, at an average speed of two to three miles per hour. (CP Wirephoto)

AIR BARGE TESTED

EDMONTON (CP) — An air-cushion barge, versatile enough for use either as an Arctic transporter or an offshore drilling rig, was unveiled here.

The $300,000 prototype weighs 144 tons and is capable of carrying up to 112 tons of cargo or equipment, or facilities to make it into living quarters for 60 persons.

The vehicle was developed by Arctic Engineers and Construction of Houston, Texas, and its affiliate company, Arctic Systems Ltd. of Calgary, with Arctic transport specifically in mind.

The vehicle, called the ACT-100, is not self-propelled, like a hovercraft. Its two 1,280 horsepower engines are used only for air floatation of the 75 by 57-foot hull. Locomotion is provided by another vehicle, at speeds of up to eight miles an hour.

The developers said a larger version of the ACT-100 is to be built soon.

They said the barge concept is less costly and can be operated by oil field personnel without the expertise necessary to handle self-propelled hovercraft.

New Plywood Mill Operating

Special to the Times

ARMSTRONG — Crown Zellerbach this week began manufacturing plywood at a new $8 million plant here, and company officials are wondering whether their timing is bad or beautiful.

As crews loaded the first production runs of fir and western softwood sheathing aboard boxcars for Canadian and foreign markets, vice-president for building materials, Bill Beaton, said:

"We've built one of the most modern, efficient and automated plywood plants in North America, because we've anticipated a long-term recovery in plywood markets.

"And, after almost two years of severely depressed markets, demand has been picking up during the past few months.

"If the current improving trend continues, then we'll be okay."

He said it is too early to view recent market improvement as the start of a long-term recovery. "Any lasting strength will depend largely on the success achieved from government measures to stimulate the economy."

The plant's annual capacity on a three-shift basis is 100 million square feet of sheathing. The product is manufactured with waterproofed glue in four by eight panels for use in such construction as subfloors, walls and roofs; boxes and other industrial packages; and farm construction.

The Armstrong mill increases Crown Zellerbach's total plywood capacity by 50 per cent. Other plants are at Kelowna and Fraser Mills. Crown also operates seven lumber mills in the Okanagan region.

Floating Dollar 'Aiding Economy'

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — A fresh study of Canada's floating dollar by a United States economist concludes that the flexible exchange rate gives Canada a significantly better chance of managing its own economy independently of its powerful southern neighbor.

Although the flexible rate may mean some temporary problems, the study finds that a floating dollar gives Canada the benefit of both independent economic policy and continued access to foreign capital.

The study is by Robert M. Dunn, formerly with the U.S. Federal Reserve Board and now associate professor of economics at George Washington University here.

It was financed and published by the Canadian-American Committee, which in turn is sponsored by the Private Planning Association of Canada and the National Planning Association of the U.S., both of which bring together businessmen, labor leaders and others to promote economic and similar studies outside government.

Dunn's study is commended as a "significant and timely contribution" in a foreword signed by dozens of committee members from both countries, although they do not necessarily endorse his conclusions.

CITES TWO DRAWBACKS

The foreword says the "unique intimacy" of financial relations between Canada and the U.S. raises the question of the "degree of freedom left to Canada to manage its own domestic economic policy in an unfettered North American capital market."

Dunn maintains that Canada's degree of freedom in fact "depends heavily on the choice of its exchange-rate system."

And he cites two drawbacks for a fixed-rate system. He says it combines with mobile capital to force American interest rates on Canada, whether Canada wants them or not, and combines with extensive foreign trade ties to "ensure that Canada will import whatever cyclical instability develops in the United States."

On the other hand, since the adoption of a flexible rate in June, 1970, "Canada is no longer forced to match or approximate the current U.S. monetary policy if that policy is inappropriate for the Canadian economy."

Much of Dunn's study is taken up with comparisons between the periods of fixed and flexible rates for the Canadian dollar, particularly in recent years, although he notes that the dollar has floated for about 33 of the last 70 years.

During the 1962-70 period when the dollar exchange rate was fixed at 91⅛ cents U.S., the "constraints on a separate monetary policy were particularly tight . . . and provided great difficulties for the management of the Canadian economy by policy-makers in Ottawa."

Dunn adds that the current flexible rate "may present some relatively modest operational difficulties," but it also makes possible a "combination of independent Canadian economic policies and continued access to foreign capital." Dunn also deals with two objections to the floating dollar: international disapproval and the effect on Canadian exporters.

Although the floating dollar has met with generally sympathetic understanding abroad, some European governments and international organizations are known to disapprove because of the possibility of chaos in world money markets if other countries follow Canada's lead.

"Lack of international popularity has been one cost for Canada of the 1970 decision to float the exchange rate," Dunn says.

However, in this case, the "demands of world opinion and financial orthodoxy conflicted directly with Canada's national interests and, if national sovereignty is to retain any meaning, the ultimate responsibility of those setting economic policies in Canada must be to the needs of the national economy rather than to the demands of world opinion. . . ."

'UNPLEASANT FOR MANY'

"Canada's current role as a renegade in the world of international finance is undoubtedly unpleasant for many in Ottawa, but a premature decision to return to a fixed exchange rate . . . could cost Canada a great deal more than international prestige."

The loss of profits or competitive advantage for Canadian business are blamed by Dunn not on the flexible rate but on the fact that the value of the dollar rose. He believes the difficulties may be reduced by recent changes in European exchange rates — revaluation of Swiss and Austrian currencies, and floating of West German and Dutch rates.

But national policies to help industries affected by the dollar's higher value are the long-range answer, he says.

Dunn feels Ottawa has indicated in the last year that it is more aware of how a flexible-rate system works than it was in 1960 to 1962, when he says the floating dollar was allowed to contribute to recession.

"This seems to be one of the happy but all-too-rare occasions when the advances of economic theory actually produces improvements in policy-making," he adds ironically.

Finland Wants Canada Goods

VANCOUVER (CP) — La Se Oka, Finland's trade commissioner to Canada said that there are many goods and high technological products that Canada could sell to Finland which would improve Canada's unfavorable balance of trade with that country.

Speaking to a "Salute to Scandinavia" luncheon at the B.C. International Trade Fair, the trade commissioner said that while Finland's exports have grown to $26 million in 1970 from $3.2 million in 1967, Canada's exports to Finland have not risen and amounted to $8 million in 1970.

The trade commissioner said the Finnish display at the fair emphasizes the country's industrial achievements in helping to build Canadian industry, including equipment for the Eurocan pulp and paper plant at Kitimat and the container glass plant at Moncton, N.B.

He's Dead—And Angry About It!

By ROBERT A. FASCE

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The epitaph for Charles Starkins is written in legalese and filed away somewhere in a courtroom cabinet and in the records of the New York state correctional services department.

He breathes, he works every day, but he's a dead man in the eyes of the state. His death came one morning in 1953 with the rap of a judge's gavel, sentencing him to life in prison for the murder of his father.

Under a 171-year-old state law known as Civil Death, Starkins' marriage was dissolved, his children no longer had a father and there was no court to which he could take his case. The state legislature is considering a proposal to repeal the law.

Seven years after Starkins walked through the iron gates at Sing Sing Prison, he was told his children had been adopted. He hadn't heard from them since the day he was convicted of second-degree murder.

"When you're sent to prison you still have your feelings," Starkins says. "Your love and concern for your family just doesn't stop. You're still a human being.

LOST FAMILY

"There was no court, no governmental agency or anyone else who told me anything about the adoption. If I had been notified at the time it would have been a little easier."

Starkins, 41, was paroled last February and he says he has lost track of his family.

His conviction resulted from the shooting death of his father at their Nassau County home in 1953. He and his wife were tried for murder and his wife was acquitted.

The Civil Death law was passed by the state legislature in 1799. Pending in the state legislature is a package of bills that would repeal the statute and restore certain civil rights to life-term convicts. The repeal has the backing of state correction officials.

Starkins recently visited the state capitol and appeared with sponsors of the legislation in an effort to draw attention to it.

URGES REPEAL

"To automatically annul a prisoner's marriage, parenthood or right to institute a suit is completely without rational basis," says state Correction Commissioner Russell Oswald. "This civil death concept is today an anachronism and should be repealed."

The law only applies to those men and women under life sentence. At present, officials estimate there are about 200 such prisoners in state institutions and upwards of 11,000 on the street under parole.

Correction officials here say that similar Civil Death concepts are reflected in the laws of other states.

Even though Starkins' wife was allowed the right to remarry while he was in prison, Starkins cannot—at least not until he proves to the court that he has obtained a legal divorce or submits proof that his wife was remarried.

Charles Starkins has spent 17 years of his life in jail and today works for a tie manufacturer in Manhattan—"doing whatever they want done, whatever there is to do."

He can't vote and there are jobs in the state requiring licences he'll never be able to hold. Under the 171-year-old law, he is a living dead man—legally.

Press Ban Tightened

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The government has placed new restrictions on reporters, barring access to the main police headquarters. While there was no official explanation, the action was believed linked with the rigid government censorship against all mention in the local press of leftist guerrilla activity.

CALL IT WHAT YOU WILL, IT'S STILL TOPS

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — A beer is a beer is a beer—but in Australia you need to be more specific to get satisfaction.

In New South Wales state, beer-drinkers ask for a middy, a glass or a pony. Across the border in Victoria state the call is for a pot or a pony, but a pony is smaller there than in New South Wales.

And so it goes from state to state—a confusing situation for the drinking traveller that a new book published here sets out to unravel.

The book, A Migrant's Guide to New South Wales, covers a wide range of advice to immigrants, including how to avoid being burned up by Australia's sunshine and how to avoid starting a bushfire.

Perhaps the most interesting section is an up-to-date glossary of Australian slang.

Even English-speaking immigrants have language problems in Australia. The vocabulary is sometimes peculiar to this part of the world.

Brown Bombers, for instance, are traffic wardens. If they "dob you in" (report you) you'll have "Buckley's chance" (none at all) of escaping being served with a "bluey" (a summons to appear in court). And "doing our block" (losing your temper) won't help at all.

But the really useful "drum" (information) in the book is on the subject of beer.

In New South Wales, a halfpint measure of beer is called a middy. There is a 15-fluid-ounce measure called a schooner, most commonly seen in waterfront bars and in industrial suburbs. A "glass" is seven ounces, and a pony five ounces.

'STOL' TRAVEL NEAR REALITY

TORONTO (CP) — For people tired of the usually long, frustrating trip from an airport to the city—which in some cases takes longer than the actual flight—a solution is on the horizon.

The answer is STOL—an abbreviation for short takeoff and landing.

The idea is to build mini-airports closer to the city, capable of handling planes carrying about 50 passengers comfortably.

The STOL concept has already received strong recommendation by the Science Council of Canada, so implementation might not be far off. An experimental service is planned between Ottawa and Montreal.

The Metropolitan Toronto waterfront development project is also prepared for "the STOL age" and has set aside land for such a project on the waterfront. The idea of a floating airport on Lake Ontario has also been shown to city council by an architectural firm.

Canada itself is a leader in the STOL planning. Two Canadian aircraft manufacturers— Canadair in Montreal and de Havilland in Toronto—have been involved for some time.

De Havilland has built 300 Twin Otters, a 20-passenger STOL plane, and is ready to build its next model, a 48-passenger craft named the DHC-7.

Canadair also has had experience with the development of its CL-84, a vertical takeoff and landing aircraft (VTOL).

There are other attractive features about the STOLport, including cost.

The airport, which would use a maximum 2,000-foot runway compared with 10,000 feet for jet runways, would only cost $500,000.

This figure compares with an estimated $400 million for the proposed new Toronto international airport.

The size of the airport would also not exceed 35 acres, compared with Malton airport's 6,000 acres.

The Science Council of Canada, in a recommendation to the Ontario government last November, suggested immediate construction of the STOL project.

"The timing of the program is crucial in order to make full use of the lead which Canadian industry has at present," it said.

If the project is undertaken, Kingston may be included.

"We're very excited," Mayor E. Valorie Swain of Kingston said. "We've been asking both the provincial and federal governments for this for years.

"There is no question that the lack of a scheduled air service to places such as Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal has held us back. When we follow up industrial leads one of the first questions that ask is: 'Do you have a scheduled air service?'

"We have to say no."

Egyptian Oil Hopes Raised

By STEPHEN SCOTT

CAIRO (CP) — For 20 years Egypt didn't look deep enough for oil.

During that time careful seismological maps were made of the sub-surface of the Western desert down to 6,000 feet. Little was found.

And then modern technology allowed a drilling rig to go beneath that depth. Now Egypt is talking of becoming one of the world's major oil exporters.

That one drilling rig of the American Amoco company has drilled three wells at Abul Gharadik in the Western desert, and Petroleum Minister Aziz Sidky predicts that there will be production from the field of 200,000 barrels a day.

This compares with the present total Egyptian production of about 350,000 barrels a day, by Western estimate.

At the same time, the oil is said to be comparable to the highest grade coming from the Libyan fields, generally regarded as some of the purest oil in the world.

The Egyptian oil is low in sulphur content, high in ingredients that go into making such products as gasoline and low in heavier ingredients used in such things as asphalt.

It was discovered at between 9,000 and 13,000 feet, where exploration is continuing.

GETS SHOT IN ARM

Sidky said recently that Egypt is about to be a large-scale exporter of oil. What he didn't bother to say but what many others are saying is that the oil presents a massive shot in the arm for the hard-currency-hungry Egyptian economy.

Officials here refuse to release estimates of how much oil is available from the discovery. But they say the drilling to date has been in one of what may be several large fields in the Abul Gharadik basin.

And they say there could be five or more basins in the desert with the same geological structure.

To date one-half of Egyptian oil production has come from the Morgan field in the Gulf of Suez. That field, exploited by the American Philips and Amoco companies and now by a Japanese firm, is said by Egyptian officials to be large, but they refuse to give figures.

Sidky announced that a 150-mile, 300,000-barrel-a-day pipeline will be built from the new discovery to join one at the old and depleting field at Alamein. Plans will be made to expand the capacity if necessary.

Meanwhile, plans are under way to bring more rigs to the new field.

MUST PAY COSTS

Under Egyptian law, foreign companies pay the entire cost of exploration. Then these companies go into a joint venture with the state oil company and share the production revenue 50-50.

Exploration costs are amortized over a five- to 15-year period.

Amoco and Philips and the one Japanese coompany are the only foreign companies in the field at present. There are seven Egyptian companies. But Egyptians feel sure that other foreign companies now will express interest.

Incidentally, it is reported that Egypt still gets some oil revenue from Sinai desert operations that were captured by Israel in the 1967 war. The Italian company operating this property is said to pay royalties to the Egyptian government from Rome.

Oil is playing an ever-increasing role in the Egyptian economy.

Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and some other West Europeans have pledged to finance a $200 million Su-Med pipeline project that will see a 42-inch pipeline running from the Gulf of Suez to the Mediterranean coast near Alexandria, bypassing the now-blocked Suez canal.

When completed, the pipeline will carry between 50 and 70 million tons of oil a year from a new gulf port to a new port at the other end.

WOULD STILL NEED IT

Officials say that even if the Suez canal is reopened and, in an estimated six years time after opening, widened and deepened to handle super-tankers, the pipeline will still be needed.

For one thing, the canal will never be able to handle such ships as the 300,000-ton monster launched recently in Japan.

For another, there is only one port in Europe that can handle super-tankers: Rotterdam. From there, oil must be trans-shipped to smaller ships or transported by land.

How much cheaper and better it would be, officials say, if the big tankers discharged in the Gulf of Suez and smaller tankers that can call at most ports picked it up at the Mediterranean shore.

One official, asked about competition from a similar pipeline in Israel, said that each year world oil production is 10 per cent less than world needs.

And that makes Egyptian oil loom large.

Teachers Protest

HANEY (CP) — Sixty-two teachers marched through this Fraser Valley community Tuesday to protest the firing in March of Maple Ridge secondary school principal Bob Knowles.

The teachers, all from Maple Ridge secondary, marched from the school to the Haney school board office where they stood outside in silent protest for 15 minutes to back their demand for an independent investigation of the firing.

Mr. Knowles was fired by unanimous decision of the board which has refused to make public its reasons for the firing and has refused to reconsider. The teachers were joined by scores of students and their parents.

'Arrogant, Inhuman' Rent Board Attitude Hit by Tenant Head

The Victoria rental advisory board was accused Tuesday of hearing an "arrogant, inhuman attitude" towards tenants for suggesting renters find new homes if their present rents are too high.

Mrs. Anne Tarasoff, executive secretary of the Capital Region Tenant Organization, said some board members of the Rental Accommodation Advisory Board have "no conception" of what it is like for people on fixed income when their rents are arbitrarily raised.

Mrs. Tarasoff's remarks were contained in a prepared brief she read to the board's meeting Tuesday afternoon.

She said the advisory board "has been of benefit" to renters but it lacks the legal power it needs to be successful in preventing "gouging" of tenants by landlords.

To suggest, as the board has done, that tenants unhappy with rent increased move to new accommodations with lower rents is an "arrogant, inhuman attitude towards renters," Mrs. Tarasoff said.

Calling landlords a "law unto themselves," she said, "It's the kind of profits they want to make on the basic rents of people that we object to."

But she said the tenant organization is not in favor of "rent controls as such."

Increases in rents should not exceed any increase in costs of operating the building, she said.

Mrs. Tarasoff said there are many instances of unjustified rent increases, but gave only one example. The rents at the Louise Apartments, 1143 Pandora, had shown increases of up to 35 per cent since 1969.

The tenant organization called for a city bylaw to be established under provincial enabling statutes, a stop to increased power for landlords, and assurances that the city would not permit the institution of security deposits.

Board member Jack Vaio said there is nothing the board can do about the Louise Apartments but in any case the rents are "not exhorbitant." He called the apartments a "beautiful little building."

He added that in Victoria property owners "are not making money" on property investments.

Tosh Indignant Over Welfare, May Be Going Back to London

One of Victoria's more authentic bits of Olde England may be lost soon if council doesn't change its mind about selling goods on city property

Tosh the barrow boy, whose fruit stand had become a familiar part of Bastion Square, says he will not "disgrace" his pearly king costume by living on social welfare, and threatens to go back to England.

Tosh, whose real name is Pat Kelleher, was turned down by council a month ago when he applied to operate his fruit stand at the entrance to the CPR docks on the south side of the Inner Harbor.

His former sponsors, the merchants of Bastion Square, did not renew his contract last year.

Now Tosh has written another letter to council, applying again to operate his stand near the air taxi station by the waterfront.

"I am now on social security from the 4th of June, and with this I disagree when I am available and can be useful for the tourist trade, and willing to play my part.

"As to the wearing of the pearly king costume, I do not want to disgrace it by being on social security."

Tosh's history includes becoming a barrow boy's helper at the age of 15 and at one time he was making £20 plus commissions working for the Covent Garden Fruit and Vegetable Association.

"I understand that one of the objections to my previous application was the hampering of traffic, but this would not apply to the area in question," the letter to council continues.

"I feel I could be worth while to myself and to others by serving the tourist industry at Victoria Harbor — literally the gateway to Victoria.

"If my application again is not recommended, my intentions are, through the authority of Victoria; for my family (my three children and myself) to be repatriated back to England."

Ottawa Approves $500,000 Grant

Formal approval has been given by the federal government to Victoria's request for $500,000 in urban renewal funds, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday.

Under an urban renewal formula, federal and provincial grants will amount to $750,000 and the city will contribute another $250,000.

The $1 million total will pay for most of the cost of acquiring the Ocean Cement factory and property at the foot of Humboldt on Wharf, where a small park and marina are planned. The cement factory acquisition is considered a key move in getting redevelopment started in the area.

As planned, the full urban renewal program for the Inner Harbour waterfront has a cost of about $4.5 million.

Uvic Trio Awaits Word of Hearings

The three University of Victoria faculty members whose contracts were not renewed don't know yet if they have been invited to attend hearings next week into circumstances surrounding the non-renewals.

Neither does Faculty Association president Charles Doyle, who only learned of the hearings Tuesday night when contacted by a reporter.

Doyle said today the fact the association had not been contacted about the hearings would do little to restore faculty confidence in the Uvic administration.

A three-man panel headed by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court will open public hearings Tuesday into the cases of chemist Dr. Tikam Jain, English teacher Dr. William Goede and philosophy teacher J. P. Graff.

The other members of the panel are Vancouver lawyer Brian Carrothers and University of B.C. Professor Vladimir Okulitch.

The hearings were announced Tuesday by Duncan lawyer David Williams who is acting as solicitor for the tribunal. Williams said 28 invitations have been issued to people directly concerned in the non-renewal affair.

According to the Universities Act, the tribunal is an advisory board which doesn't have the power to call or swear witnesses, Williams said.

He said the hearings would be open to anyone who had testimony to give about the cases of the three teachers.

Handled by University

When asked today why the faculty association had not been informed about the nature of the hearings, Judge Wilson said from Vancouver that the mechanics of the hearings were being handled by the university.

He said he wanted to make it clear he had not named the other members of the tribunal, but when asked to do so had suggested some names and the university had approved them.

Doyle commented:

'It' would have been a polite gesture to inform us about the nature of the hearings. We hope these gentlemen will come up with reasonable findings, but even if they do this way of doing things is not any kind of long-term solution."

Doyle said when names of the tribunal members were announced he was given to understand its terms of reference would be discussed and that the faculty association would be included in the discussions.

Still later, Doyle said, he heard that while faculty members would not have a voice in setting terms of reference, they would be included in a discussion of procedures to be followed during the hearings.

Today he said:

"It seems evident that we are not going to be consulted about procedures either."

Hearings will open at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of the MacLaurin Building.

City Hydro Hit By Spot-Strike

Rotating one-day strikes by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against B.C. Hydro hit Victoria today.

Fifty-five line crew men did not report to work this morning. Not involved are the men who work in electrical substations. No pickets were posted.

Another 28 electrical workers were out in Cranbrook, while 70 workers who left their jobs Tuesday at Courtenay, Chilliwack and Abbotsford went back this morning.

The IBEW is conducting 24-hour strikes against B.C. Hydro to back contract proposals. The union is seeking an 18½ per cent wage increase in a two-year contract and protection for employees against contracting out of work. B.C. Hydro has offered 7 per cent more in any year of a one, two or three-year agreement.

The Victoria men on strike today normally carry out maintenance and construction of electrical distribution.

Asked if the strike will affect operations, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said "no, operations will carry on normally. If there are any problems we'll do our best to cope with them."

Doug Cronk of Vancouver, business manager of IBEW Local 258, who was in Victoria today, said the men are expected to return to work Thursday morning.

Asked what will happen if there are emergencies, he said the union has a policy of establishing a system to take care of them but in Victoria, after two days of meetings, Victoria management would not agree to this policy.

"The responsibility is on B.C. Hydro," said Cronk. "We have offered it, and they have said no. There has been no such problem anywhere else in B.C. regarding emergency coverage."

Cronk said the union policy to protect the public is in the case of emergencies. He mentioned hospitals, major fires and any problem with primary power such as live lines on cars.

Hearing Set for June 29 On Sunro Mine Appeal

The Pollution Control Board will hear on June 29 the appeal of a mine company near Jordan River which has been refused a permit to discharge tailings into Juan de Fuca Strait.

The hearing will open at 10 a.m. in room 104 of the Provincial Museum and while the public can attend, only the nine parties which have qualified as objectors will be heard besides the company.

The Pollution Control Branch declined to identify the nine objectors today because letters advising them of the appeal have just gone out. Their names will be available Friday.

The appeal has been launched on behalf of Sunro mine which last week learned that its application to discharge up to a million gallons daily of mine tailings from a pipe just below the low tide line had been refused by William Venables, the province's director of pollution control.

While some residents near Jordan River, commercial fishermen and conservationists are among those who opposed the application, wording of the announcement from the PCB last week hinted that confidential recommendations from two government departments — health, and recreation and conservation — had been major factors in Venables' decision.

On the latter point, E. C. Dobell, vice-president of Crownex International, said today the two departments had not seen the explanatory material the company had forwarded to the PCB with its application, even though a company officer had checked more than once to see if it had been passed along.

A spokesman for the PCB refused to confirm or deny this, saying there would be no comment because the case was subjudice, active and unresolved before the judicial process.

The Pollution Control Board is a six-member body to which appeals can be made from decisions of the Pollution Control Branch. Its decisions in turn can be appealed to either the cabinet or the provincial supreme court.

Board chairman is Valter Raudsepp, deputy minister of water resources. Other members are Dr. J. A. Taylor, deputy minister of health; R. G. McMynn, director of commercial fisheries, department of recreation and conservation; J. W. Peck, chief inspector of mines; Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie from the medical faculty at UBC and James Allin, department of agriculture.

NO FREE FARES FROM VICTORIA

Take Warning, Transients

Victoria city hall wants to put up a sign at the Lower Mainland ferry terminal warning transients that return fares are not available here simply for the asking.

A special meeting between aldermen and welfare representatives was held Tuesday at the request of the Salvation Army, which has received 142 requests for ferry fares this year, compared to last year's figure of 25.

Ald. Ove Witt suggested the city ask the province for permission to erect a sign at Tsawwassen terminal, warning transients of the tight money situation in Victoria.

"We must slow them down," Ald. Percy Frampton commented. "They ask for a ticket to Vancouver and we don't know whether they have 50 bucks in their pockets," he said.

Q. Do you have an address for the retired Frank Sinatra?—M.B.

A. Sinatra Enterprises, 400 Warner Blvd., Burbank 91503, Calif.

Q. Could you give me the business address of Lawrence Welk?—Mrs. E.E.L.

A. Welk's office is at 2444 Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, Calif.

Q. Would you please inform me of the total number of employees at Government House on Rockland Avenue? What is the annual cost to the province of maintaining this residence?—J.B.D.

A. A source at Government House advises the staff numbers about 10. The provincial government's public accounts office reports the cost to the province for the last fiscal year, April 1, 1969, to March 31, 1970, was $55,488.

Glendale Head Ex-U of A Director

Dr. J. K. Martin, director of the University of Alberta's department of pediatrics, has been appointed medical director of the new Glendale Hospital in Saanich.

A government news release Tuesday also announced appointment of the hospital's deputy medical director, Dr. H. J. Brooks, who is with Woodlands School in New Westminster.

LUCKILY FOR MY trade, the time is long past when newsmen whose scrivenings displeased authority stood in danger of losing their ears. If it weren't, Victoria's city hall reporters might today be combing their hair low on the sides.

Their offence, as seen through the eyes of irked officialdom, was that they declined to be muzzled by an entirely uncalled-for off the record order with which Victoria's Mayor Haddock chose to cap some last-week utterances about the Hare Krishna street people.

As a result — and in proof that medieval thinking persists in some quarters — the bogey of the closed committee meeting has been conjured up in attempt to intimidate the press.

The gist of this threat is that city council has the right to bar reporters from committee meetings, and that reporters should keep the fact in mind when asked to withold items from the record.

In other words, submit to a form of news censorship, or else!

The closed committee meeting by one Greater Victoria council or another is not a new device. Its effect is to keep the voter from learning how local issues that concern him are to be dealt with until the governing body concerned is ready to flip its hand.

Once in a long while, there may be a legitimate reason for such a conclave. Generally, though, you the taxpayer would do well to question the motives of the politician who insists that the groundwork of city or municipal decisions must go unreported.

"Off the record" isn't a new political device, either. There are times when such a request is perfectly legitimate, and deserves to be respected. But as every reporter speedily learns, it is leaned on far too heavily by men in public life who see it as a convenient escape-hatch by which they can avoid the embarrassment of standing behind their less inspired utterances.

Mayor Haddock, of course, has a right to air his views on street-chanters or on any other sjubect. But the mayoral right does not extend to telling the press of this city what it may or may not print.

Two weeks ago, former Timesman Jim Bigsby and his family set out for their home in Vancouver after visiting relatives and friends in Victoria. On the way their car was involved in a crackup that sent five persons to hospital.

"Reports of auto crashes are traditionally news," friend Jim writes, "but who ever heard of a news item written by the crash victims, containing what they thought was important?"

He then goes on to turn out such a report.

"Several passing motorists assisted at the scene of an auto accident on the Pat Bay Highway May 25. One who stopped to help was Dr. Roy Smillie, who had the foresight to carry field dressings in his car. He directed first aid operations and was instrumental in preventing possible tragedy.

"The Central Saanich volunteer ambulances responded within minutes, gathered by a home-call system as efficient as it is personal. Operating under pressure, they were nonetheless effective and very reassuring to the victims.

"In the emergency wards of Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's and Rest Haven Hospitals, the skills and warmth of a series of doctors and nurses were brought into play. Friends and relatives appeared in astonishing numbers to do the many chores that needed to be done, and to cheerfully visit during those long days in hospital."

There's a good word too for Central Saanich police, who made it to the scene less than a minute after the call was received.

Bigsby appends a couple of pleas to his victim's-eye account.

"1. To passengers and drivers: wear seat belts, no matter how uncomfortable they feel. I think they saved our lives. They might save yours.

"2. To drivers, including me: be careful in that car, for your sake as well as the other guy's, because it hurts."

Words worth heeding, from one who's been there, and considers himself lucky to have survived the experience!

CANUCKS GRAB AHL SCORING CHAMPION FRED SPECK

IMLACH KEEPS DRAFT MEETING LIVELY

Horton Goes to Pittsburgh; Oakland Gets Carleton

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Red Kelly does not feel Pittsburgh Penguins were taking a chance Tuesday when they grabbed veteran defenceman Tim Horton in the National Hockey League's intra-league draft.

"Tim's a leader on the ice. He can pick our club up. He could give us the momentum and leadership that could carry us a long way.

"I don't think $40,000 is that big a gamble when you are going for the Stanley Cup."

Horton was one of 23 players the 14 NHL clubs drafted from each other at a total cost of $920,000 during 14 rounds of the annual internal draft.

Vancouver Canucks came up with two centres and a defenceman, all of whom are regarded highly but one of whom may revert back to Montreal Canadiens.

The first pick was defenceman Dennis Kearns, from Chicago. Kearns, 25, played with coach Hal Laycoe at Portland, and last year was with Dallas of the Central League.

The Canucks' second choice was Fred Speck, 23, a centre. He was drafted from Detroit, and last year with Baltimore led the American League in scoring with 92 points and 61 assists. He scored 31 goals and was the league's all-star centre.

Reynald Comeau, 22, was the third Vancouver choice. He scored 26 goals with Cleveland and Montreal Voyageurs of the AHL last season.

It is believed, however, that Comeau, a centre, will revert to Montreal in exchange for the favor of Montreal placing Vancouver-owned goalkeeper Ed Dyck, formerly of Calgary, on their list to get him safely through the reverse draft.

The Canucks did not lose any of their players to other NHL teams.

The Penguins picked the 41-year-old Horton from New York Rangers in the second round of the proceedings.

Horton said in Toronto that he has many plans, but they are outside of hockey.

"I'm a tired old man. . . . I've had enough hockey," Horton said.

Aside from Horton, Pittsburgh took defenceman Dave Burrows from the Chicago organization in the first round and later grabbed forward Rene Robert from Buffalo Sabres.

The Sabres were the most active club in the proceedings as general manager-coach Punch Imlach picked up six young players at a total cost of $240,000.

In turn, Imlach lost veteran forward Don Marshall to Toronto Maple Leafs and goaltender Gary Edwards to Los Angeles Kings.

Imlach shrewdly waited until the late rounds and extended the affair by shifting veteran forward Reggie Fleming on and off his protected list nine times.

"Reggie was the most valuable player of the draft," said Imlach.

"We waited until the other clubs had packed their lists and got Fleming moving like a bouncing ball. The great thing is that we got some good kids and they can go down without waivers."

Veteran left winger Wayne Carleton, who scored 22 goals as a member of Boston Bruins last season, was the No. 1 pick in the draft as the California Golden Seals picked him up for $40,000.

The Golden Seals also grabbed Frank Hughes from Toronto and forward Stan Gilbertson from Boston.

Detroit Red Wings surprised many observers by making only one claim— goaltender Al Smith from Pittsburgh. The Wings dropped Jim Rutherford, a former standout goaltender in the Ontario Hockey Association, when they grabbed Smith and the Penguins quickly snapped Rutherford up.

In a previously arranged deal, Minnesota drafted Brian Lavender from the Canadiens and dropped Bob Murdoch, who was immediately claimed by Montreal.

St. Louis made one claim— Mike Parizeau from New York Rangers. Philadelphia Flyers made two selections—defenceman Larry Brown from the Rangers and forward Frank Spring from Boston. The Flyers lost forward Gary Peters to the Bruins when they dropped him off their protected list after getting Spring.

BILL WALKER

Hockey anyone? And manager Eric Bishop of the Victoria Cougars of the B.C. Junior Hockey League is the first to admit that co-existence with the best is vital to the building of a junior hockey club into a money-winner, as well as into a part of big-time sport

"We have to go tier one," he said last week in announcing that the Cougars had applied for entry into the Western Canada Hockey League.

For those who haven't been around before, tier one is the top flight in junior hockey in Canada. Last year the Cougars were in tier two, even a modified version of tier two at that. In other words, Victoria had junior hockey, but it was watered down, and not as good as the club-owners eventually wish for their team.

Besides the Cougars could use over-age players, which didn't sit well with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and prevented a club from sharing in CAHA benefits for draftable players, and other financial concessions.

So why not go for the top? That is the thinking of the board of management of the Cougars. Because last year, the Cougars actually had no place to go, even if they had won their divisional playoffs. This year, if their application is successful, they can shoot the works. It's first class all the way, even if the players may be hard to come by in the first season.

This makes common semnse to many observe, although the B.C. Hockey Association may not agree. The loss of Victoria, New Westminster, and possibly Vancouver, would be a severe blow indeed.

Victoria in the past few years has contributed much more than any other club to the BCJHL coffers and the BCAHA, and naturally there would be some concern over the loss of this revenue.

It has often been said, and still is, by some cynics that the only people holding back amateur hockey are the administrators themselves. This goes right down to the club level. They all live in their own fiefdom of power, and it's hard to break through the outer crust.

Even the Cougars last year were a case in point. They were fooling only themselves with the use of over-age players. They never did have permission of the CAHA to do it, and neither did other clubs. The saving grace was that, for the most part, the addition of these players provided the club with a winner.

Now the club wants to break out of this morass. In a remarkable candid statement, Bishop admitted that "The Cougars want in" to the WCHL, even though there is little possibility of being an instant hit in the winners category. It could be said, too, that the WCHL wants-in to B.C. And why not? This could be as good a breeding ground as any.

If the Cougars came in for some criticism last year, it was deserved, but that was last year. This season they intend to give Victorians something better.

"This is the big league," said Bishop. "We will be competing with the best in the west." Regarding player assistance, there have been indications from other clubs that they are prepared to assist the Cougars with players. There is no doubt the Cougars will need that help. But then the club started from scratch once before when it entered the BCJHL, and forged to the top. Perhaps it can do it again. At least the effort will be made, and this should silence the infighting which earlier suggested the acquisition of the local club by Calgary interests was strictly a deal of convenience.

Not so, it would appear, because indulging with the big teams from Calgary and Edmonton means a bigger outlay of cash as well. Expenses would at least double that of last year. But the calibre of hockey would be improved too. It's a move in the right direction.

Actually, junior hockey is a best seller in most cities acorss the land. In the east, sellouts are common; in the west, Calgary won't entertain the thought of putting a Western Hockey League franchise into the Corral, because of the juniors.

"The pros would die," is the cry. So why hurt junior hockey? That is the Calgary view. Besides, what's the biggest story of the week in hockey? It's which juniors are going to be drafted by which NHL clubs, and in what order?

Frankly, the move to tier one is inevitable, and about time, unless the BCAHA or the CAHA aborts it before it gets off the ground.

That's Bishop's only worry at the moment. That, and a coach, who will probably come with the franchise.

Canucks Deal With Detroit; Provost Purchased by Kings

MONTREAL (CP) — Minnesota North Stars anounced Tuesday that right-winger Bobby Rosseau has been sent to New York Rangers to complete an earlier deal between the two National Hockey League clubs that sent Bob Nevin to Minnesota last month.

Rousseau, 30, appeared in 63 games with the North Stars last season, scoring four goals while picking up 20 assists.

He was acquired by the North Stars from Montreal Canadiens last season in exchange for Claude Larose.

The Canadiens announced that right-winger Claude Provost has been sold to Los Angeles Kings.

Provost sat out the 1970-71 season rather than play in the American Hockey League with Montreal Voyageurs, the Canadiens' top farm club.

Provost, 37, scored 254 goals and gained 335 assists in 1005 NHL games.

And Detroit and Vancouver completed a two-for-two player trade. Red Wings sent forwards John Cunniff and Gary Bredin to the Canucks in exchange for Irv Spencer and Bob Dillabough. All four will be assigned to American Hockey League clubs.

Lacrosse Fans Enjoying Dunc's Role as Fighter

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dunc Wilson, National Hockey League goalie turned lacrosse defenceman, was the star attraction in Western Lacrosse Association play Tuesday night as he led Vancouver Burrards to a 12-11 win over Coquitlam in a fight-and-penalty-filled contest.

The two clubs piled up a total of 177 minutes in penalties and at one stage in a brawling first period the two clubs were ordered from the floor to cool off.

Wilson, not adverse to throwing punches in his role as goalie for the NHL Vancouver Canucks, was front and centre in the wild first period brawl.

IN THREE FIGHTS

An instant box office hit when he joined Burrards a week ago, Wilson was a key man in Vancouver's victory over Coquitlam but the 1,750 fans obviously got more enjoyment out of his role as a fighter. He was involved in three separate fights in the near-riot emptied both benches. The action started when Coquitlam goalie Dave Wedlock charged Vancouver's Dave Litzenberger after Litzenberger gave Burrards a 2-1 lead.

Officials Jim Grey and Barry Ballance appeared to have things under control 10 minutes later, but three more fights broke out with Wilson taking part in two.

League commissioner Tom English instructed the officials to order both teams to the dressing rooms with 6:56 remaining in the first period after he had personally warned the teams against further brawling.

The officials later handed out 15 major penalties, six misconducts and a match misconduct to Vancouver's Dennis Quigley for kicking an opponent.

FANS IN UPROAR

English said he would hand out fines today.

The crowd, which seemed to regard Wilson's actions with appreciation, was in a continual uproar throughout the game.

Leading scorers for Vancouver were Dave Litzenberger with three goals and Nick Delmonico with two. Singles went to Allan Tasker, Spencer Rea, Brent Ojanen, Ross McDonald, Taki Bohalis, Brian Bergum and Doug Hayes.

Coquitlam's top scorer was John Allen with three goals followed by Wayne Shuttleworth and Bill Robinson who netted two apiece. Scoring singles for the Adanacs were Kevin Parsons, Les Schumacher, Doug Wallsmith and Keith Scott.

NHL Alters Playoff Format, Stiffens Rules on Brawling

MONTREAL (CP)—A new format for the Stanley Cup playoffs and stiff legislation aimed at curbing bench-clearing incidents in the league were approved Tuesday by the National Hockey League's board of governors.

Under the new playoff system announced by NHL president Clarence Campbell, series A will pit the first-place team in the East Division against the fourth-place team while in series B the second-place team in the East will meet the third-place squad.

In series C, the first-place team in the West will meet the fourth-place team and in series D the second-place team will meet the third-place team.

The winner of series A will meet the victor in series D in one semi-final, while the winner in series B will play the winner of series C to determine the Stanley Cup finalists. This is a continuance of the cross-over system of playoffs instituted last season.

Under the former playoff format, the first- and third-place teams and the second- and fourth-place teams played each other in the quarter-finals.

ALL WANT NEW RULE

The new rule guarding against bench-clearing melees won unanimous support from the governors.

An automatic major penalty will be assessed against a team when one of its players is the first identifiable player to leave the bench. In addition, the individual will be given an automatic game misconduct penalty.

The NHL rules committee had proposed that a minor penalty be imposed against the team and a game misconduct against the player, but the governors felt a stiffer penalty was in order.

The game misconduct means automatic expulsion from the game, plus an automatic $100 fine the first time a player violates the rule during the season.

If a player receives a game misconduct for leaving the bench a second time, he will receive an automatic one-game suspension in addition to the game misconduct and the automatic $100 fine it carries.

WILL HIT HARDER

Campbell said there would be an escalation of the game suspension each succeeding time a player leaves his bench. For example, if he is charged with a violation a third time, he will receive a two-game suspension, while a fourth violation carries an automatic three-game suspension.

Other players who leave the bench and become "sufficiently involved" in any fight to receive a minor, major and misconduct penalty, will also receive an automatic game misconduct.

The new rule will be more stringent in the playoffs.

"There will be no second chance in the playoffs," Campbell said.

"A player who is identified as the first to leave his bench will automatically receive a one game suspension the first time he violates the rule, plus the pro-rata loss of his playoff award money. If the player violates the rule a second time, he will receive an automatic two-game suspension and so on."

NO ACTION ON APPEALS

The board of governors has not yet decided on appeals by Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs against fines slapped on them by Campbell.

Campbell slapped a $1,000 fine on Boston Bruins for their part in a late-season melee and tagged Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers with the maximum $5,000 sentence for a bench-clearing affair during their quarter-final playoff.

Both the Leafs and Bruins have balked at paying the fines and have appealed them.

Canada Loses Soccer Clash

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Mexico's ball-handling ability proved too much for the Canadian team's spirit and strength and Mexico pulled ahead in the North American soccer elimination tournament for the 1972 Olympics with a 1-0 victory Tuesday night in Azteca Stadium.

Mexico now is 2-0 in the tournament, having defeated Bermuda 2-0 two weeks ago. Canada has a 1-1 record with a 3-0 win over Bermuda.

Canada and Mexico meet again next month in Canada.

The Mexicans slowed down the Canadians, controlling the ball with short, measured passes and keeping the ball on the ground away from the taller Canadians.

The Mexicans' game was superior to that of the visitors but they failed to get more goals because Canadian goalkeeper Peter Greco of Vancouver made at least three spectacular saves.

The Mexican goal came in the 35th minute when Jesus Rico scored on a header from five yards out.

For the Canadians the best players were Sergio Zanatta, Sam Lenarduzzi of Vancouver and John Sheppers of Toronto.

Scheppers brought the biggest scare of the Mexican net in the 85th minute when he fired a head shot from three yards out which was stopped with a spectacular dive by goalie Valdivia.

Westendale Collects 17 Runs in One Frame

Westendale Constructionettes went around the batting order twice and scored 17 runs in a big fourth-inning rally Tuesday at Beacon Hill Park and went on to beat Independents, 29-12, in Senior Women's League action.

Eight walks were issued in the inning, including four in a row, bringing to 13 the number of free passes given Westendale batters in the game.

At Naden Field, Tillicum Athletic Club went around their batting order twice in the second inning to score 13 runs as they bombed CFB Roadrunners, 26-5.

Of the 31 runs scored by both teams, none resulted from doubles, triples or home runs. All hits in the game were singles.

OPTIMISTS TRIUMPH

Evening Optimists defeated Gonzales Pharmacy 18-15 in an Oak Bay Little League baseball game Tuesday night.

In action at Lockside Park, Pat Kutney pitched a two-hitter as Cablevision Juniors blitzed Moose Lodge Loyals, 18-1.

FACES VICTORIA CLUB . . . . . . IN OPENER SATURDAY

Twamley to Play for Spartans

Bruce Twamley, a former Victoria soccer player, is back in town on a busman's holiday after a second season with Ipswich Town of the English League's first division.

Twamley, 19, who played most of the season for the Ipswich reserve squad, received a starting assignment as fullback with the first side for two matches near the end of the term.

Now visiting his home on holidays prior to reporting back to England for pre-season training on July 14, Twamley will be "just playing a couple of matches" with Vancouver Spartans of the Western Canada League.

In fact, some of his old clubmates may be on the opposite side when Spartans face Victoria Royals in their season-opener at 8 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic Park.

Asked whether he anticipated more starts with the main Ipswich team during the 1971-72 season, Twamley replied in the affirmative.

"For if you don't have confidence in yourself, you might as well not play," he added.

Twamley said that he would be playing for Spartans when they were in Victoria and "maybe" one or two matches in Vancouver.

"I've had 10 months of it now and am a bit tired really," he quipped.

But not too tired to stay in trim!

Spartans are being managed this year by Bobby Cram, who played for fourth-division Colchester United during the past English League season.

Royals had some heavy opposition from Spartans last season before beating them in the Coast Division playoffs and going on to win the WCSL title over Prairie Division champion Regina Concordia.

Pancho Continues Hunt For All-England Crown

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first thing you notice about Pancho Gonzalez are his eyes.

They don't only reach out and grab you, they hold you.

They have a hard narrow set about them similar to that you're likely to find in many other professional athletes who keep looking into the sun all the time and merely looking at them you get the idea right away they aren't the kind that figure to gush big crocodile tears if they happen to see something like, say, Love Story up there on the movie screen.

Pancho Gonzalez has never pretended to rank with the great sentimentalists of our time.

He's a practical man, generally any time he does something you can bet there's a purpose. He isn't one, for example, to go off on some sentimental journey.

Nonetheless Pancho Gonzalez was dragging his somewhat weary 43-year-old bones to London today on what can only be described as a labor of love rather than any mission for money.

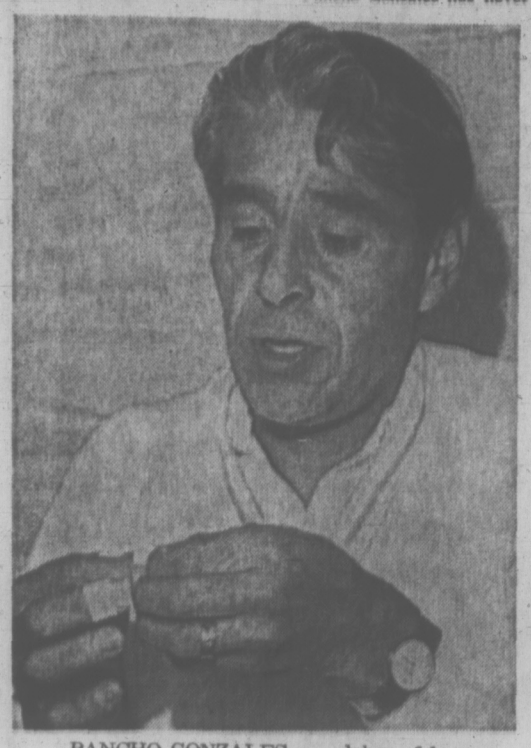
The winner gets roughly $9,000 and there are some pro golfers who don't even change their slacks for pin money like that, but Gonzalez is going over for an entirely different reason.



PANCHO GONZALES . . . labor of love

LIKE OPEN TO SNEAD

To him the Wimbledon singles crown is what the U.S. Open is to golfer Sam Snead and what the world basketball championship is to Wilt Chamberlain. Pancho Gonzalez has never won the Wimbledon title. Oh, what he'd give to win it now!

You may have the vague idea that somewhere along the line you heard Gonzalez say he was retiring from competitive tennis, and really there is nothing wrong with your hearing, but it turns out what Gonzalez actually said was he simply intends limiting his appearances.

"I'm at the point now where I'm pickng my tournament spots and Wimbledon is one," he said.

LAVER TOP MAN

There was a time Pancho Gonzalez was the world's No. 1 tennis play. He isn't anymore, Rod Laver is, but there's always the lingering feeling that maybe he can get the adrenalin working sufficiently so that he can knock over Laver, the way he did once last year, and that in itself can keep a man going for a while. Who knows, he says to himself, it could happen again at Wimbledon, couldn't it?

Gonzalez doesn't try to hide the fact he has to make certain concessions on the court because of his age.

"I have been for the last three years," he says. "The fact I've been able to win certain events surprises me, but I'm always hopeful and I try to get into the best shape I can."

There are certain little tricks a man can use.

LOBS A LOT MORE

"I lob a lot more than I used to," Gonzalez says. "Most of the young players don't have a technique for lobbing. In a lot of cases it's a tiring shot for the fellow on the other side of the net, lob after lob after lob, and it also keeps your opponent from closing into the net so much. If you can keep him backing up just a little bit, it'll not only keep him off balance but eventually it'll make your passing shot more effective."

Pancho Gonzalez used to be almost as famous for his explosive temper as he was for his explosive serve, but those old flare-ups of his only make him laugh now.

MEDIUM TEMPO

"As a youngster you do some of those things without realizing them," he says, "Then when you get halfway through your career you may tend to ham it up a little bit, and as you get older you realize you don't have the energy to spend on acting like that. When you get older you have to get less excited. Excitement uses up energy. Nervous tension just works you up, so you try to slow everything down to a medium tempo."

Gonzalez can hit more shots now than he ever could. Getting to the ball though is another matter.

"When I get tired physically out on the court," he laughs, "I just look at myself and say what am I doing out here."

The truth is that medium tempo doesn't ever figure to beat Rod Laver. For Pancho Gonzalez the hope now is that . . . maybe . . . maybe . . . maybe it might.

Garagemen Win On Howe's Hit

John Howe's tie-breaking double scored Terry Strandlund in the seventh inning Tuesday at Royal Athletic Park to bring Al's Home Service a narrow 3-2 win over Gorge Hotel in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game.

Three-hit pitching by Terry Karpiak was not enough to keep Gorge off the scoreboard as they tied the game in the third on a run-scoring single by Mike Embury and Lorne Bunyan's groundout.

Al's scored their other two runs when Russ Holmes hit into a bases-loaded double play, scoring Ralph Anderson in the first inning, and on a run-scoring single by Strandlund in the second.

Seaboard Climbs Near Top Berth

Seaboard Construction moved to within a game of first place in the Victoria Major Men's Softball League Tuesday and evened their season's record at five wins and five losses as they defeated Strathcona Hotel, 4-2, at Central Park.

A passed ball in the first inning and a wild pitch in the seventh accounted for two Seaboard runs, and singles in the third by Wayne Forland and pitcher Barry Wilkin completed the Seaboard scoring.

Wilkin allowed only two hits, one a solo home run by Roy St. Denis in the third inning, until two out, seventh-inning threat brought Glen Bullen on in relief.

Steelers Nip Labs After Extra Inning

Gene Swynarchuk hit a key one-out single in an extra inning to score the winning run as William Head Steelers defeated Labatts 3-2 Tuesday in Stuffy McGinnis Softball League action at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ron Konanz, who scored on the eighth inning play, was given a free pass to first on an error, stole second and went to third on a groundout before cleanup hitter Swynarchuk singled. Swynarchuk also singled in a run in the fourth inning.

Pitcher George Wellings aided his own cause by singling in a run in the seventh inning and pitched out of a one-out bases-loaded jam in the eighth by forcing two batters to pop up.

Labatts forced the game into extra innings when Ron McDonald singled in Barry Granger in the seventh to tie the score. Bob Harris pitched the top of the eighth inning and took the loss in relief of Bob Palm who struck out thirteen and allowed six hits.

HANK AARON . . . two short of record

By The Associated Press

Aaron drilled his 18th home run and a single for his eighth straight hit during Tuesday's night's 8-7, 10-inning triumph over St. Louis Cardinals.

"I knew I had been hitting well, but I don't keep up with records . . . you don't have time to remember things like that on a club this exciting," said Aaron, whose eight safeties in three games were two shy of the National League mark.

Aaron moved over the .300 level for the first time this season with a four-hit night Monday and padded his mark to .313 with Tuesday night's work.

"I get weak and tired late in a game," Aaron said, "and those extra innings don't help."

CUBS NIP PIRATES

In the other National League games, Chicago Cubs nipped Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 in 12 innings, Los Angeles Dodgers stopped Philadelphia Phillies 4-2, Montreal Expos whacked San Francisco Giants 10-3, New York Mets turned back San Diego Padres 6-4 and Houston Astros whipped Cincinnati Reds 2-0.

Aaron's hitting string included a single and home run Sunday and two doubles and two singles Monday prior to his two-run homer in the first inning and third-inning single Tuesday night.

Aaron's hitting helped Atlanta build a 7-3 lead as slug-mate Orlando Cepeda delivered a three-run homer, his 14th. But the Braves wasted the advantage by giving the Cardinals four runs in the eighth, three on two infield errors.

Holtzman, in his first start since pitching a no-hitter last Thursday against Cincinnati, struck out 12 and spaced nine hits in going the distance.

EXPOS HIT MARICHAL

Montreal raked San Francisco ace Juan Marichal for five runs in the first four innings and rode Bill Stoneman's 13-strike-out pitching to a triumph over the spinning Giants, who lost their sixth of seven games.

After Stoneman struck out the side in the first, the Expos pounced on Marichal for three runs in their half of the inning. Mack Jones, who singled in the opening-inning burst, also hit a home run in the second. John Bateman delivered a four-bagger in the fourth to highlight Montreal's 13-hit offence.

SHAMSKY HOMERS

Art Shamsky hit a homer and Jerry Grote broke out of an 0-for-14 slump with three hits and a run batted in as New York topped San Diego.

Don Wilson pitched a five-hitter to outduel Gary Nolan in Houston's triumph over Cincinnati.

Gomer's Lunch Is Sam's Feast

By The Associated Press

Lunching with Gomer Hodge has its advantages where Sam McDowell is concerned.

McDowell, Cleveland's fireballing left-hander, had his ceremonial pre-game victory meal with team-mate Hodge Tuesday and then feasted on Chicago White Sox 5-3 with 11 strikeouts.

"Give the credit to Gomer," insisted McDowell, who has had either breakfast or lunch with Hodge before each of his five previous triumphs this season. "I normally don't consent to be interviewed or photographed before I pitch, but I did this time because it was the only way I could have lunch with Gomer.

"We couldn't have breakfast together because he lives on one side of town and I live on the other. But I found out Gomer was going to the Wahoo Club luncheon (an Indians booster group) and I decided the only way I could have lunch with him was to go there, too."

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox snapped Oakland Athletics' five-game winning streak 5-1, Baltimore Orioles made it six in a row with a 8-2 rout of Minnesota Twins, Detroit Tigers trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 8-3, Kansas City Royals beat Washington Senators 4-2 and New York Yankees blanked California Angels 3-0.

SAM OVER .500

McDowell checked the White Sox on six hits and three walks and raised his record over .500 for the first time this season at 6-5. The 11 strikeouts marked the 72nd time he has been in double figures, increasing his American League record. Sandy Koufax of the Brooklyn-Los Angeles Dodgers did it 97 times, the major league mark.

Roy Foster's three-run homer in the second inning was the big blow for the Indians. McDowell allowed a two-run bloop single to Rick Reichardt in the third and Tom Egan homered in the ninth.

Few British Players Make All-England List

WIMBLEDON (AP) — Only six British men have been accepted for the All-England tennis championship, the smallest number since the Second World War.

The All-England Club announced that 116 players had been accepted for the men's singles in the championships starting June 21.

All the world's top names were included, among them two notable veterans — Frank Sedgman of Australia and Pancho Gonzales of the U.S., both 43.

Sedgman won the title in 1952. Gonzales has never won it.

The list included 25 Australians and 19 Americans. But the only Britons accepted were Roger Taylor, Mark Cox and Graham Stilwell, the three pros under contract to World Championship Tennis and Davis Cuppers Gerald Battrick, Peter Curtis and Stanley Matthews.

Other Britons may gain berths from the qualifying tournament and fill some of the 12 places left vacant.

The seeding and draw will be made the week before the tournament.

NEW TRANS-AM SERIES . . . . . . TO INCLUDE JAPAN

Skiers Get Smaller Letters

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Ski Association has adopted new specifications for advertising and trademarks on equipment that will reduce by about one-third the size of commercial lettering permitted on skis, boots, bindings and poles.

The specifications were presented to the CSA's annual meeting here by Pierre Alain of Cornwall, Ont., and Arnold Midgley, of Ottawa. They had just returned from an International Ski Federation meeting in Yugoslavia, where the specifications had been introduced for federation members.

Under the ruling, letters on skis are not to exceed 25 millimetres in height and 35 millimetres in width. On boots and bindings, no letter shall exceed 15 millimetres and on poles no letter shall exceed 10 millimetres.

As well, no visible commercial identifications are to be permitted on the exterior of clothes, uniforms, helmets, gloves or goggles.

Al Raine, alpine program director, said ski and equipment companies which have produced the markings to comply with the old regulations will have to re-do them.

In other business, the CSA and the United States Ski Association announced that a new series of competitions in the two countries will begin this year.

The new program, which is designed to develop and promote Nordic skiing in North America, will be called the Trans-Am series, and will involve Canada, the United States and Japan. The events will be held in Canada and the United States.

Radio Gurgles Vanish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The portable radio that gurgled and the binoculars that sloshed may become objects of yesteryear at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum where they're going to start selling beer.

When city council voted to end the sport stadium's life-long drought, it drew cheers in some quarters — like the dorms at UCLA and Southern California — while a chorus of boos could be heard from bars and liquor stores in the neighborhood of the giant arena.

The Coliseum, the only major sports stadium in the United States which didn't sell beer, long had been the target of the great smuggling rackets. On hot days, all sorts of gadgets would be brought into the place as ticket taker-guards carefully watched to see that no one brought in booze.

The guards failed.

After all, how many "portable radios" can a guy check to see that they're not really hollow and filled with precious liquids? And how many "binoculars" can be looked through for a view instead of a brew?

There were other ideas, besides the old hip flask and the wallet flask and the vest flask.

An old trick was revived by the college mob. Oranges were injected with vodka through a syringe. Another idea: a hollowed-out book with a flask inside. And who'd deny a coed her right to carry in a stuffed animal, even if it did slosh a bit?

William Nicholas, general manager of the Coliseum, said the sale of beer serves a number of purposes but first and foremost, he said it attempts to stop the smuggling.

The Coliseum, home of Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and the football teams of USC and UCLA, is right next door to the city-owned Sports Arena, which already serves beer.

Windsor Track Abandons Attempt To Revive Thoroughbred Racing

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The attempt to bring back thoroughbred racing to the Windsor area after a lapse of 36 years, has been called off after a 17-day trial.

"We thought there would be a market here for night thoroughbred racing, but it doesn't appear there is," president Bill Rowe of Windsor raceway said.

The last card was Sunday. There were 26 more racing days scheduled when the track board of directors called off the meet because not enough people were attending and not enough money was being bet.

Admission was free Sunday and 4,665 persons turned up. It was the largest crowd of the meet, but still little more than half the number drawn by the harness horses during a good winter card.

They wagered $232,834, well below the break-even projection for the meet.

Windsor raceway is the only track in Canada, and one of only two in North America, with a rubberized, artificial surface. For the thoroughbreds, this was topped with a dampened, inch-deep layer of loam and sand.

Thoroughbred racing died in this area in the mid-1930s. It was on the old Kenilworth track here that Man O' War and Sir Barton, Canadian-owned champion which was the first winner of the Triple Crown, met in a match race in 1920.

Man O' War won by seven lengths over the ailing Sir Barton and neither horse raced again.

Racing got off to a bad start at Windsor raceway. Scheduled to open on May 14, the raceway, after arranging a temporary truce against a mutuel employees strike, finally opened May 19.

Averages for the first week were 2,784 attendance with an average handle of $139,699. After 17 days, attendance had dropped to a 2,285 average and betting had skidded to $119,766.

Rain Washes Out Pakistan's Hopes

BIRMINGHAM (Reuter) — Rain crushed Pakistan's hopes of winning the first cricket test against England on Tuesday when less than an hour's play was salvaged from the final day

During that time England, which followed on Monday 255 runs behind Pakistan, took its overnight score from 184 for 3 to 229 for 5 before the match ended in a draw.

Opening batsman Brian Luckhurst finished with 108 not out, having completed his third test century.

The bad weather was a cruel blow to Pakistan, which at the close Monday night looked to have a magnificent chance of victory as England still needed 71 runs to avoid an innings defeat.

But the rain washed out both the morning and afternoon sessions and it was not until 54 minutes before the close that play resumed.

County scores:

Essex beat Warwickshire by 125 runs. Essex 351 and 206 for 5 declared; Warwickshire 276 and 156.

Worcestershire 215 for 7 declared and 146 for 8 declared; Leicestershire 201 and 45 for no wicket. Abandoned.

Middlesex beat Northamptonshire by 8 wickets. Northamptonshire 243 and 170. Middlesex 342 for 7 declared and 74 for 2.

At Blackheath, Derbyshire beat Kent by 93 runs. Derbyshire 307 for 8 declared and 134 for 5 declared; Kent 203 and 145. Abandoned as draw.

Yorkshire beat Nottinghamshire by an innings and 131 runs. Yorkshire 375 for 5 declared. Nottinghamshire 102 and 142.

Surrey beat Cambridge University by 172 runs. Surrey 307 for 4 declared and 115 for 3 declared; Cambridge University 160 and 90.

Hampshire 389 for 4 declared and 173 for 5 declared; Glamorgan 322 and 92 for 5. A draw.

Sussex beat Lancashire by 5 wickets. Lancashire 344 for 6 declared and 225 for 5 declared; Sussex 333 for 5 and 238 for 5.

Salmon Fry Kill Issue Overcome by Pulp Mill

DUNCAN — The salmon fry kill at the Crofton pulp and paper mill's intake system on Cowichan River has dropped from 7,000 to 40 daily during the spring migration, a meeting of conservationists was told Tuesday.

Mill manager Bill Reynolds said the problem was solved by installing an improved screening system costing $35,000.

The meeting was attended by representatives of island and lower mainland fish and game clubs, Cowichan-Malahat SPEC, the mill's union pollution committee, the provincial water rights branch and the federal fisheries department.

The department of fisheries had given the mill until this spring to come up with a solution. Thousands of fry had been killed every year.

Karl Kupka, senior engineer with the resources development branch of the fisheries department, said he has been concerned about the fish kill since the system was set up in 1956 and described the mill problem as an exception.

PROBLEM LICKED

"But now the mill's staff has come up with a unique and complex screening system and I can safety say we have the problem licked. I can say they have a good intake system now," Kupka said.

He said this spring during the salmon fry's downriver migration there was a daily kill of 10 to 40. Last year the fisheries department had estimated the daily figure for the five-week period at 7,000.

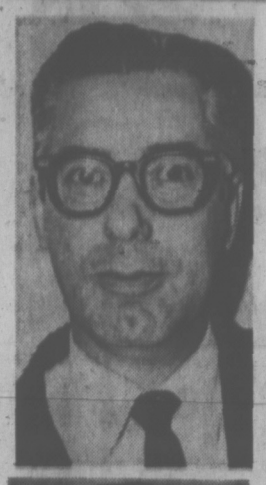
Kupka said each of the mill's four intake channels had individual problems.

Some fish were penetrating the structure over the screen channel and couldn't return to the river and others were plastered against the screen because the suction was too great. Some were mangled inside the screen.

Kurt Horn, president of Cowichan SPEC, expressed concern over the department's approach to the matter and asked if it is going to take each company or industry individually and allow them 12 years to kill millions of fish.

"If I catch one fish undersize or over my limit you fine me and take away my equipment. Let's be consistent. Are there two laws, one for companiies and one for people?

Horn, who had applied much pressure last spring on the company and the department of fisheries, congratulated the mill for finding a solution — "although it is disappointing that it took them years and public pressure to do it."



NEW APPOINTMENT at Cowichan Senior Secondary School is John H. (Bert) Morgan (above), who becomes principal July 1 replacing Harry Dewar (below) who assumes the position of principal at Kelowna Secondary School. Morgan, a vice-principal at Cowichan for the past two years, has been teaching for 17 years. He spent one year in New Westminster and 14 years at Ladysmith Secondary where he was vice-principal for six years.

Their Castles Of Driftwood Bow to Ecology

However humble, a man's home is his castle, and he doesn't take kindly to being turfed out.

That was the message Pacific Rim National Park superintendent George Trachuk recieved when he tried to convince beach residents Tuesday night to move from their huts and lean-tos by Sept. 30 for ecological reasons.

"When your paper and plastic empire comes down around your head, come down to the beach and we'll teach you how to live," one aroused beach dweller told Trachuk.

Trachuck explained that the beach dwellers were still welcome in the park but they would have to abide by the rules as would all park visitors.

Camping areas have been set aside from Green Point north to Schooner Cove, Trachuck said, and an area for walk-in campers — complete with portable toilets and garbage pick-up — would be provided.

Despite the plea to preserve the area for all time in its most natural state, the 30 young people and gaggle of dogs who turned up for the Green Point meeting appeared unimpressed.

A bearded beach dweller commented, ". . . you are just saying we can not stay in the homes that we built with so much hard work."

Law Student Sues Pope For $345

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A law student wants $345 from Pope Paul because of an undelivered St. Bernard dog.

The attachment culminates a three-year battle by William Sheffield, 32, who says he visited a Roman Catholic-operated monastery in the Swiss Alps in 1968 and made a $60 down payment for a $175 St. Bernard dog. But the dog never arrived.

Sheffield said he then wrote to the monks demanding the dog or a refund. He said they replied that the dog would not be shipped unless he paid all costs in advance—plus a fee to take the dog to Geneva Airport. His deposit would not be refunded because it had cost $60 to carry his account.

Sheffield then sued Archbishop Joseph McGucken of San Francisco for $345—the $60 deposit, the $200 he paid over the Swiss price to buy a St. Bernard in California, and $85 in expenses.

The California District Court of Appeal held Archbishop McGucken was not responsible for the Swiss monastery, "so . . . then I served a court summons the Pope by mail," Sheffield said.

". . . The problem is outside the court's jusisdiction, how do you collect?"

Police Taught To Curse

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — El Paso policemen are being taught to curse in Spanish under a program financed with a $61,000 Texas Criminal Justice Council grant, the council said Tuesday.

The program is conducted by the University of Texas at El Paso.

"The officers must know the cuss words so they will know when they're being insulted," a spokesman said.

KUPKA
. . . staff shortage

He suggested to Kupka that the department put the "screws" on offending outfits so solutions will be found quicker.

"I think the fisheries department should bear down on companies. If you have a club it is well hidden."

"You can't put the screws on unless you know exactly what is wrong," Kupka said. "I have to know what to suggest and the solution before I can apply pressure."

Kupka said his department is understaffed and unable to hit all of the problems at once. He said he could use five times his present staff to attack problems such as the McKenzie River pipeline and the Moran Dam on the Fraser River.

TO HOLD DOWN CONSTRUCTION COSTS

Assembly-Line Schools Essential

Mass-produced schools may be the answer to a mushrooming school population and a construction bill estimated at half a billion dollars from now to 1980, B.C.'s deputy minister of education said here today.

He said by 1980 full-time public school enrolment would reach 600,000, and the system would have to recruit 3,500 new teachers annually.

"If we can get school boards, planners, architects, builders and manufacturers all working together on a mass-production systems approach to building, we ought to be able to keep costs under some control," Phillipson said.

"We just can't afford to do it any other way. When the cost of education per student is rising considerably faster than the gross provincial product per person, which it is, and faster than income per person, which it is, something has to give."

Hanging Judge 'A Calamity'

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — The polite convention that former British chief justices are interred without acrimonious post-mortems at least until their bones cool off has been rudely shattered.

Lord Goddard, known as an erudite dispenser of the law and also as a so-called "hanging" judge, died 11 days ago at the age of 94. He was lord chief justice of England from 1946 to 1958, and presided over countless trials in 25 years on the bench, sometimes with apparent relish in sending killers to the now-abolished gallows.

The obituaries were of the conventional type until columnist Bernard Levin in The Times, who used to cover the courts as a reporter at trials presided over by Goddard, cut loose with a slashing attack on his brand of justice Tuesday.

Levin wrote:

"I might as well say plainly that de mortuis nil nisi bunkum is not a principle that has ever appealed to me. Goddard, as lord chief justice, was a calamity."

JUDGE ANSWERS

Later Tuesday a top judge, Master of the Rolls Lord Denning, in opening his court gave what was interpreted in some quarters as an answer to the columnist.

"He was respected as no other judge of our time," Lord Denning said. "He will go down in our annals as one of the greatest of chief justices."

Levin pinned his attack on the late chief justice partly on his handling of a murder case in 1852 that convicted Christopher Craig, 16, and Derek Bentley, 19, of the killing of a policeman.

After Goddard's death, author David Yallop, writer of a forthcoming book on the trial, said that in an interview—apparently the only one the old chief justice ever gave—had told him he was unhappy about the fact that Bentley, who had not fired the fatal shot, was hanged, while Craig, who had, was reprieved.

"If Goddard did indeed claim this," Levin wrote, "it was a breathtaking piece of hypocrisy, in view of his conduct of the case."

Be Prepared for the Battle Sadat Warns Suez Soldiers

CAIRO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat has told the Egyptian army to be ready for battle before the end of the year.

In a speech to soldiers along the Suez canal, extracts from which were published today, he told the troops: "The battle will end one way or the other in the year 1971."

The Egyptian leader renewed his Feb. 4 offer to reopen the Suez canal, and said he is prepared to enter into another formal ceasefire to allow clearance operations accompanied by Israeli evacuation.

In Jerusalem today, Israeli Pemier Golda Meir said her country is still ready to reach an agreement on reopening the canal but that recent statements by Sadat showed Egypt's position has become more intransigent.

She reiterated Israel's position that its troops would pull back from the waterway only if there were guarantees that Egyptian soldiers would not cross over and that no complete Israeli withdrawal would necessarily follow.

Mrs. Meir appealed to the United States to supply Israel with new weapons, especially aircraft, without delay to rectify the arms balance upset by soviet supplies to Egypt.

Mrs. Meir told the Knesset (parliament) in a major policy speech that the quantity and types of arms already supplied to Egypt and the supply envisaged in the recently signed Soviet-Egyptian treaty constituted "an even greater violation of the military balance."

Ad-Sales Head Attacks Basford

TORONTO (CP) — Pauline Hill believes the new wave consumers' rights movements —she calls it "consumerism" —in Canada can be turned back with words.

However, although she believes in the effectiveness of talk, she says Ron Basford, consumer and Corporate Affairs minister, cannot hear when the business community speaks.

Mrs. Hill, first woman president of the 3,000-member Canadian Advertising and Sales Association in 15 years, says discussion must be held among all groups in the marketing process to take the edge off demands by consumer advocate groups.

Advertisers, she says, respond instantly to any complaint passed along to them by the association.

But Mr. Basford pays little attention to the organization, she says.

Both federal and provincial governments passed "discriminatory" legislation, such as banning liquor and cigarette advertising in British Columbia.

ADS SHOULD BE LEGAL

"I believe that if a product is legally manufactured in Canada, its advertising should also be legal," said Mrs. Hill, executive vice-president and director of Welcome Wagon Ltd. of Toronto.

The association has met 20 national trade associations to attempt to unify protests against restrictive and discriminatory government legislation. Mrs. Hill says the body is developing a closer link with the Canadian Advertising Advisory Board.

Mrs. Hill says the association's efforts to develop more lines of communication to the consumer have been partially impeded by the consumer and corporate affairs department. The department refused to appoint an association member to the Canadian Consumer Council, she says.

Retail personnel, says Mrs. Hill, have "a lot to do with people jumping on the consumerism bandwagon."

For this reason, the association is switching its emphasis this year to sales from advertising and devising a code of ethics for salesmen.

WON'T GIVE TIME

Mrs. Hill, who became the first woman to join the Toronto branch of the ad and sales club two years ago, says one of the main reasons more women have not succeeded in business is because they are not willing to devote most of their time and energy to a career.

"If you want equality with men, you don't go out and fight for it, you go out and prove it."

Born in Edmonton, Mrs. Hill has a degree in health and physical education from University of Toronto. She joined Welcome Wagon in Regina in 1953 and became area director for Western Canada.

'Labor Explosion Looms'

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Edward M. Lawson said Tuesday it is only a matter of time before binding arbitration laws bring about an explosion among Canadian labor ranks "like we've never seen before."

Senator Lawson, a political independent who is the British Columbia president and the Canadian director of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said constructive labor negotiations cannot result from laws that force the parties to come together.

He spoke at a panel discussion of the annual conference of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that also included H. J. Clawson, vice-president for personnel with the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.

Mr. Clawson said arbitration was better than having essential services cut off.

Negotiations are "no longer a game between two adversaries," he said. "The public interest is going to make itself heard."

MEMBERS REJECT PACTS

William Kelly, chief of conciliation for the federal department of labor who was in the audience of about 300, said there have been several examples of negotiated contracts being rejected when the union membership voted on them.

More employee participation is needed in decisions that affect labor, he said.

J. B. Cronyn, chairman of the Ontario committee on government productivity and executive vice-president of John Labatt Ltd., told the conference leaders in various fields should change jobs on a two-or-three-year basis.

He said his committee will make such a recommendation in its report next year.

TRANSIENT HOSTEL PROTEST FAILS

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Materials to prepare a tent city for transient youth in suburban East Royalty were moved in by truck Tuesday after RCMP removed a barricade set up by housewives on the access road to the site.

The barbed-wire and plywood barrier was set up Monday when the provincial government said it had decided to go ahead with plans for the youth hostel.

The 15 women patrolling the barricade, who had said they would not leave until forced to by police, were dispersed by RCMP officrs acting on orders from the provincial attorney-general's department.

RCMP said there were a few incidents during the protest. No arrests were made.

Small groups of young people gathered at the barrier in a counter-protest while others attempted to discuss the pros and cons of the hostel with the women.

The barricade was the latest in a series of protests against the hostel, which the government had planned to put into operation June 1.

HOLD PROTEST MEET

About 80 residents of East Royalty held a protest meeting May 21 after the government announced it would set up 500 tents on 65 acres of land in the area.

After meeting with the East Royalty improvement committee, the governmnt announced May 27 that it had temporarily postponed development of the site. Premier Alex Campbell said it would give the committee more time to discuss the matter.

The premier said some sort of control would be maintained over the youths and that he would be willing to spend a night at the hostel with his family to prove it was safe.

But the residents of East Royalty were not convinced. When construction workers showed up Monday after the government announced the project would go ahead, the women and their barricade were there.

Government Spending Worries Manufacturers

TORONTO (CP) — A long-term phase of business expansion is forecast by the general manager of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, but among problem areas cited in his report is "the potentially inflationary impact of government spending."

J. C. Whitelaw, also executive vice-president of the CMA, says business indicators suggest the long-term outlook is good but unemployment and a recessionary psychology make the intermediate outlook uncertain.

Whitelaw's comments were in his annual report, tabled today at the 100th annual meeting of the 8,200-member organization. "Unemployment it not likely to disappear but the rate should gradually decline throughout 1971," he said in a summary of projections for major economic indicators.

"Profits will improve as increased productivity and rising volume begin to offset cost problems, but margins will still fall short of requirements to sustain an expansionary period.

"The upswing in employment which usually accompanies economic recovery is not expected until later this year," he added.

Mr. Whitelaw said businessmen appear concerned about high interest rates, rising labor costs and "uncertainties surrounding pending changes in government policies affecting taxation, trade, foreign ownership and pollution."

Plunkett Flunks, Campbell Claims

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell fired a statistical broadside at the T. J. Plunkett Associates report on municipal finances today.

Campbell dimissed the report as "$70,000 worth of nothing," and said B.C. municipalities received a greater percentage and per capita share of provincial fund in 1970 than they did in 1966.

Using the example of Burnaby, which Campbell said is a typical fast-growing municipality, he showed the provincial share of gross revenues increased from 14.5 per cent in 1966 to 19 per cent in 1970. The per capita increase during the same period went from $29.92 to $52.99.

FEDERAL DECREASE

During the same period, Campbell said, the per capita share of federal contributions to Burnaby decreased from $2.23 in 1966 to $.64 in 1970.

A similar decrease for federal contributions expressed in percentages also exists, Campbell's figures reveal.

Campbell said he chose Burnaby, and used its own financial reports, to confirm directly charges levelled in the Plunkett report.

"Burnaby is a good mixed community, because it's got a good balance between residential, commercial and industrial properties. It is a typeal fast-growing municipality."

SIGNIFICANT

Campbell said it is significant to study the improved net debt position for Burnaby expressed as a percentage of taxable assessments. He said assessments form the base of municipal revenues, and a decrease in the debt percentage in relation to assessments would indicate an improving financial position.

In 1966 in Burnaby, the percentage was 13.4. This decreased to 4.7 per cent in 1970. The per capita debt increased from $262.79 in 1962 to $249.95 in 1970.

"On any yardstick, using their own figures, the municipality of Burnaby, is in excellent financial shape it is a well managed municipality, it has a good council."

The Plunkett report, commissioned by the Union of B.C. Municipalities, argued that B.C's cities and towns have been paying an increasing share of welfare and education costs from property taxes. If this trend continues, municipalities face "disastrous" financial consequences, the report said.

SOCIAL COSTS

Plunkett's argument is that social costs are increasing at a greater rate than increases in provincial grants to municipalities.

Campbell's figures for Burnaby do not show the rate of increase in social costs. But Campbell said the decrease in Burnaby's per capita debt in the last five years shows it can keep pace with demands for growth.

Looking at his tables, Campbell said "this takes us well beyond the Plunkett report but the UBCM never printed it. The UBCM flunked it with Plunkett."

New Zealand Eyes Canadian Tourists

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand could achieve spectacular results by interesting more Canadians in tourist visits in the opinion of a tourist industry mission which has been touring North America.

The mission, comprising delegates from many of New Zealand's main tourist organizations, appeared to feel there is more unrealized scope for attracting tourists from Canada than even the United States.

The reason is that there are several New Zealand tourist offices already in the United States but none in Canada.

The National Travel and Holiday Association, an organization of companies and people interested in tourism, intends to urge the government to establish a tourist office in Canada.

The association's chief executive, N. E. Lobb, said on returning from North America that Canada has "tremendous tourist potential for New Zealand.

Per head of population, Canadians travel overseas in larger numbers than Americans, he said.

"The main destination for Canadians in the past has been Europe and then the Caribbean," he said, "but their attention now is turning to the Pacific where they can go during the severe northern winter."

A hotel room in the peak Caribbean tourist season now costs as much as $60 a day. Even though the air fare to New Zealand costs more, the price of accommodation is much lower.

But New Zealand will not capture the market unless it has a separate tourist office in Canada. The government tourist and publicity department has an office in New York to serve the Canadian market. But Canadians do not like to be served from the United States.

Jets Restricted

LONDON (Reuter) — Some foreign airlines operating charter flights to and from Britain have been temporarily forbidden to use jumbo jets by the department of trade and industry. Only foreign airlines which operate between Britian and their country of origin will be allowed to use Boeing 747s, which can accommodate 490 passengers. All other charter flights will be restricted to aircraft with a 252-seat capacity.

Quebec Won't Insist On Separate Powers

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec will not "tie its hands" at next week's federal-provincial constitutional conference with any commitment to insist on a complete separation of powers before agreeing to a constitutional amendment formula, Premier Robert Bourassa told the Quebec national assembly Tuesday.

He was replying to a resolution calling for such a commitment, proposed by Union Nationale Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand. The resolution was defeated.

Mr. Bourassa said it would not be realistic to demand that the entire problem of separation of powers be solved before agreeing to a formula which will allow the patriation of the constitution to Canada.

In an interview earlier Tuesday, Mr. Bourassa said that both Quebec and the federal government would propose amendments to the article dealing with the Old Age Pensions Act.

Article 94A of the British North America Act entitles the federal government to legislate in the areas of old-age pensions and additional allowances but stipulates that no federal legislation in this area should interfere with any present or future provincial laws.

SEEKS PRIMACY

Premier Bourassa's government has been pressing for provincial primacy in a wide area of social affairs.

"What is important to remember is that the proposed amendments would be available to all provinces. Some would use them and others would not," he said.

The premier told the provincial Liberal caucus Monday that Quebec would agree to constitutional guarantees for the right to use English in Quebec courts.

In the national assembly Tuesday, former Union Nationale premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand proposed a motion demanding that Premier Bourassa not accept "any constitutional amendment formula, at least not before the problem of separation of powers particularly in the field of social affairs has been solved according to requirements formulated by other Quebec governments."

Mr. Bourassa said that his government was much more "flexible" than those of his predecessors and had helped negotiations on the constitution make considerable headway during the last year.

WILL TAKE MONEY

He said he was willing to accept federal administration and financing in certain sectors of the social security field.

Mr. Bourassa noted that Quebec "is negotiating for greater authority in the field of social affairs with Ottawa and said that it was inadvisable at this time to release the texts of letters exchanged with Ottawa on the quesion.

He said that the present system of dealing with problems of social affairs does not permit the best use of public funds.

"In certain sectors, notably the two levels of family allowance payments, there are wrongs and poor procedures which result in a poor use of public funds," he said.

If the problem of jurisdiction over welfare policy is resolved at the Victoria conference, he said, "we will have solved for the moment the most important problem in federal-provincial relations between Quebec and Ottawa."

If the Bertrand motion was accepted, he said, his hands would be tied because even if an amendment formula could improve the situation he could not accept it unless the whole problem of distribution of powers was solved.

"And this assumes negotiations which could last a great number of years and which could evolve considerably," he said.

'PROTECT US' AGAINST OTHERS

By KEN POLE

EDMONTON (CP) — The French-Canadian Association of Alberta suggests that a revised constitution should allow Canadians, regardless of ethnic origin, to assimilate or reject foreign influences as they see fit.

"The Canadian constitution should contain the general laws which permit power to govern harmoniously and the people to develop all their potential," the association said in a brief to the parliamentary committee on the constitution.

"As French-speaking Canadian-Albertans we wish to see in the Canadian constitution laws which protect us against the philosophy of those for whom the Canadian identity is not to be found in duality," said the brief.

This would encourage development of Canadians, not ethnic splinter groups—a mosaic of nationalities under one flag.

Two briefs—one from the leader of the Liberal party of Alberta and the other from Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton —advocated more recognition and use of the powers of the "third level of government."

"Urban municipalities are closest to the people and are responsible for many services and amenities for the vast majority of Canadians," said Robert Russell of St. Albert, leader of the Alberta Liberals.

"Yet our taxing abilities are restricted to the extreme and any federal participation is essentially a random collection of chaotic interventions administered or implemented by provincial governments who, at best, give only paternalistic acquiescence to some of the federal government's programs," Mr. Russell said.

Mr. Dent, president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, said municipal governments are restricted because higher governments' beliefs result "from an era when there was considerable doubt as to the responsibility of local government."

85,000 Abortions a Year If Law Liberalized: CMA

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Quebec Bureau

HALIFAX — More liberal abortion laws, as recommended this week by the ruling general council of the Canadian Medical Association, could mean 70,000 to 85,000 abortions a year within a few years.

The prediction by several experts at the CMA meeting Tuesday is based on the assumption that the abortion rate will likely level off at about 20 to 25 abortions per 100 live births in hospitals and is based on 1969 live birth figures.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported there were 11,200 abortions in 1970 compared to 368,000 live births, representing an abortion rate of 3 per 100 live births.

OTHER COUNTRIES

Countries like England and Wales report rates of 4.5 abortions per 100 live births in 1968. East Germany an estimated 8 per 100 in 1967, and Greece about 40 abortions per 100 in 1966-67.

California reported about 13.5 abortions per 100 live births during the period January to September 1970. British Columbia almost 19 per 100 live births in 1970, and Ontario 10 per 100.

Dr. R. M. Lane, Victoria internist and chairman of the CMA's committee on community health care, said he would not be surprised to see the national abortion rate reach the 20 per cent mark, though he said he would hope it would not go beyond that level.

Other experts suggested it might reach a plateau of 25 per cent if abortion laws are liberalized as suggested by the CMA this week — such as by eliminating the three-doctor abortion committee in hospitals and making abortion a matter of decision between a doctor and his patient.

This expected surge in the number of abortions which will likely occur over a longer period oven with the present abortion legislation will increase the pressure on hospitals and could lead to a requirement that governments provide special facilities for abortions, according to the CMA.

It is expected that more liberal abortion laws, and better education, will result in abortions being done earlier in pregnancies and the elimination of abortions in women more than 30 years of age, according to Dr. Lane.

RESERVATIONS

Most doctors would now prefer to perform abortions before the 12th week of pregnant and many have serious reservations about doing abortions after the 15th week.

Finally, the CMA decided the profession should make every effort to document and study the effects of abortion upon the health and social welfare of the people of the community.

The two-day abortion discussion was essentially based on the principle that the CMA now recognizes there are non-medical, social grounds for abortions and the agreement that, at present, the federal legislation's specified abortion committee scheme is just not workable.

Loggers To Return

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) —About 130 International Woodworkers of America members are expected to return to work today following a one-day strike at four MacMillan Bloedel logging operations in this Vancouver Island area.

The men walked off their jobs Tuesday to protest what was described as new Workmen's Compensation Board safety regulations asking scalers to stand at least 300 feet from fallers bringing down trees.

Scalers have traditionally stood by fallers during that critical period.

The board has called for a hearing on the question for mid-June.

VICTORIA DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Standby for a Trip Into Past

It's early summer of 1892 and the railroad rules supreme, a slender strand of steel binding together the farthest reaches of a vast new nation.

Imagine yourself, a business executive, swaying in comfortable rhythm with the clickety-clack of the wheels on the track. You are at the beginning of what is still considered a miracle . . . a journey from coast to coast across Canada by rail.

It's a dream which turned into reality just six short years before, when transcontinental trains began rolling between Montreal and Port Moody, the western terminus of the new Canadian Pacific Railway, in June of 1886.

FIRST CLASS

You're travelling first class. Your car, furnished in rich leathers, lush velvets, brass and mahogany, is the newest executive model. From the front lounge you can wander through curved corridors, past varnished, glistening wood-panelled walls and cupboards neatly inset, to the room with the big brass bed.

There you might mistake one item for a cushioned side chair. But the brass tissue holder bespeaks its utilitarian function.

Your car is the British Columbia, pride of the Canadian Pacific, on its first run.

And now it's 1971. The era of the railroads is finished, Canada no longer depends on that bond of steel for its unity.

MEMORY FADING

The era is over and for many, its memory is fading quickly.

But there's an enthusiastic group in Victoria determined not to let it vanish completely. If their goal is achieved, sometime in July that luxurious executive coach of 1892 will roll again and the eerie wail of the steam whistle will echo along a 5.4-mile stretch of Canadian National Railways track between Saanich and Colwood.

Promoters of the attraction, the Victoria Pacific Railway, plan hour-long runs with two restored steam locomotives, the original British Columbia executive coach and an observation car purchased from the West Coast Railway Historical Society in Vancouver.

The attraction was to have gone into operation in May, but difficulties in restoring the two locomotives postponed the start.

Douglas Eyrl, one of the principals in the operation, said one of the two is now awaiting inspection by a Canadian Transport Commission official before it can be put into service.

Work on the now-unused CN track, meanwhile, is almost complete. It has been carried out by a fulltime staff of two and volunteers from the Juan de Fuca Railway Association.

Victoria Pacific promotion man and partner Ken Showers says a number of retired railroaders have applied to man the trains, and their experience is welcomed.

So stand by, Casey Jones followers, for a trip into the past.

You'll find that executive coach is showing its age . . . the carpet's not as deep as it once was, the velvet has lost its nap and the mahogany is starring to crack. But it's still all there.

PRANKSTER WAKES 'EM WITH BEATLES

KID DERMINSTER, England (CP) — A mystery prankster aroused an entire Worchestershire village when he put a Beatle disc on the local belfry turntable at 3 a.m. instead of the usual bell-ringing record. He turned the powerful amplifier to full volume and fled. The song—A Hard Day's Night.

Floating Plantation Huge Success

AMSTERDAM (AP) — An old houseboat wallows in the green ooze of the Kattenburg Canal. It is the flagship of the Lowlands Weed Co., a floating marijuana plantation that has docked virtually at the edge of the Dutch tulip fields.

Two weeks ago, Kees Hoekert, who owns the boat, painted a sloppy sign reading "15,000 marijuana plants for sale," and tacked it on the side of the boat, high enough so that the policemen in the precinct house 50 yards away could read it.

The only time the cops appeared was to direct traffic and to keep orderly lines on the embankment.

Hoekert says he sold out his 15,000 seedlings in two weeks and has had to close down operations temporarily.

Hoekert, at 41, is a beat generation leftover, who says he has been studying how to grow marijuana for a couple of years.

At the same time he has been checking the Dutch narcotics laws only bans possession of the "dried tops of female hemp" plants and says nothing about the sale of live ones.

Yankees To Stay

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state legislature has given New York City the insurance it says it needs to keep the Yankees playing in Yankee Stadium.

As one of their last items of business for the year, legislators early today authorized the city to purchase the 48-year-old stadium, refurbish it and lease it back to the ball club.

Mayor John V. Lindsay said the move was the only way the city could keep the team playing in the "House that Ruth Built." Babe Ruth made the Bronx ball park famous by knocking home runs out of it.

Forger of Masterpieces Goes Places... On His Own

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Han van Meegeren, once known as the world's master forger, would doubtless have an ironic chuckle beyond the grave if he could see what has happened to one of his successors in the art-faking game.

Hungarian-born Elmyr de Hory, 59, whose brilliant reproduction of the styles of such modern masters as Picasso, Matisse and Modigliani once fooled even Picasso himself, has just had his first one-man show in a London gallery.

To crown his new acceptance in the art world, a financial adviser writing for one of Britain's national newspapers is even tipping de Hory's work—now signed with his own name—as a sound investment for the future.

"These paintings could well be the great money-makers in the next decade or two in the auction rooms of London, Paris and New York . . . a worth-while dividend," writes Patsy Lyons in the Daily Mail's investment section.

GALLERIES FOOLED

Unlike van Meegeren, the Dutchman who fooled art galleries and collectors—including Nazi leader Hermann Goering—with supposed "lost" masterpieces by Johannes Vermeer and Pieter de Hogh, Elmyr de Hory has never been charged with forgery.

Van Meegeren was forced to own up when he was charged after the Second World War with selling Dutch art treasures to the occupying Nazis. To clear himself of the charge of being a collaborator, he had to paint a "Vermeer" before the eyes of the disbelieving Dutch authorities, who were highly embarrassed to find that one of van Meegeren's forgeries was hanging in pride of place in the Boymans Museum in Rotterdam.

He was given a year's jail sentence but died before he could appeal.

De Hory, however, claims that his paintings in the style of 20th century masters — about 1,000 canvasses in all—were not forgeries because he never signed the artist's name to any of them. De Hory, who now lives on the Spanish Mediterranean island of Ibiza, says unscrupulous dealers bought his paintings cheaply and passed them off as genuine master-works.

TAKEN FOR RIDE

A Texas millionaire named A. Hurtle Meadows was taken for a ride when he discovered that 40 of his collection of 55 impressionists and post-impressionists were actually by de Hory.

But the Hungarian's greatest coup came when he sought a certificate of authentication from Picasso for a nude study painted by de Hory. Picasso said he remembered painting the girl, adding: "It took a long time to complete, though, as I could not resist making love to her."

At the recent London show, de Hory's paintings and drawings—many of them still in the style of other artists but now signed with his own name—sold well at prices ranging from $1,500 to $2,500.

Nowadays he also paints in his own style, described by the gallery owner as "figurative and very romantic"—mostly tranquil studies of nudes in soft tones of blue-grey.

TOKYO — Nicolae Ceausescu, Romanian Communist party chief, ended a week's visit to China today and said he is trying to patch up differences within the Communist camp, Peking's New China news agency reported. Ceausescu, who has had talks in the Chinese capital with party leader Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai, flew to Pyongyang, North Korea, today. He said his talks with the Chinese were "successful," but Chou in farewell speeches was scornful of the Soviet Union.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A blind man who was accused of defrauding the telephone company by whistling into the phone and using electronic equipment to make long-distance calls free has been fined $10.

In addition, Judge Ray Churchill sentenced Josef Engressia to 60 days in jail, but suspended the term. Engressia was arrested after police with a search warrant found an electronic box which he was alleged to have used, along with the voice whistles, to activate long-distance switchboards in a manner that circumvented billing equipment. Engressia, who said he made calls around the world, pleaded not guilty to charges of possessing illegal equipment and defrauding the telephone company.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Police Lt. Alfred McDonald wants to make a trade: basketballs for guns. "I'll personally give a basketball to each youth who hands over a sawed-off shotgun," McDonald said. McDonald, a member of the police department's tactical patrol unit, made the offer in response to a charge that patrolmen confiscated six basketballs during a raid at the headquarters of the Pythons, an east side gang.

BURLINGTON, Iowa — Joan Littrell gives her 12-year-old cocker spaniel, Tippy, beer as a treatment for his arthritis and to help him overcome "the shakes." As she puts it," the only time that dog has any pleasure in life is when he has some beer."

Unfortunately, her neighbors didn't seem to understand. So, when they saw Tippy stagger from Miss Littrell's house and pass out in the yard, they called police on the assumption the dog was dying. The police, discovering the truth, charged Miss Littrell and her fiance, Ross Miller, with cruelty to animals. They also decided to let the crocked cocker sleep it off after several attempts to revive him failed.

SAN FRANCISCO — A blue-ribbon citizens committee on crime said today it "found itself continually shocked by what it saw" during an investigation of the San Francisco police department. "Some officers sleep in the station or in radio cars during their shifts," said the 28-member committee appointed by Mayor Joseph Alioto in its 138-page report urging major changes in police operations. "Some have lunch or dinner as 'guests' of the restaurant they visit, and after their meal some officers fail to report back to the communications dispatcher for duty.

ROSEBURG, Ore. — A group of residents has asked the U.S. national weather service to accept a herd of wild goats as the official weather forecaster for the area. Roseburg has no weather office. Since it was closed several years ago, reports are prepared in Portland. But some residents says the goats do better job of forecasting. If the goats go up 1,200-foot Mount Neko near Roseburg, it means good weather. But, if they come down in the morning — stay at the bottom — it will cloud up and probably rain.

Soviet Strategy Aims at Iceland

By FRED COLEMAN

REYKJAVIK (AP) — Strategic Iceland guards vital air, sea and submarine lanes across the North Atlantic. It proves a key to Western security that the Soviet Union, more or less openly, is seeking to neutralize.

Icelandic, foreign diplomatic and military sources report a steadily increasing Soviet presence in the area for the last four years. The Soviet effort includes military exercises, propaganda and political agitation campaigns, reconnaissance and espionage.

A North Atlantic Treaty Organization base here tracks Soviet air or surface ship and submarine traffic as it moves into the Atlantic.

NATO sources estimate Soviet submarine activity in the North Atlantic has increased 400 per cent in the last four years.

The Soviets have about 350 submarines in all, some 160 of them assigned to the northern fleet that prowls these waters.

MUST PASS ICELAND

Western sources say that at any one time up to 60 per cent of the deployed Soviet submarine force is in the Atlantic. To get there, from northern Soviet bases around Murmansk, these vessels have to pass Iceland, where warning devices pick up their signals.

The Soviets are agitating to pull Iceland out of NATO, or at least to close the base.

To help fuel this campaign they have established the largest embassy in Iceland, with 11 accredited diplomats and 50 more embassy workers lacking diplomatic status. With wives and families the Soviet colony comes to about 100. It is three times the size of the local police force.

On the military level, the Soviets have stepped up reconnaissance missions spying on the NATO base, United States Air Force jet aircraft regularly take off to intercept and chase away Soviet planes. The number of such intercepts has grown from less than 20, in 1965, to more than 300 last year.

Since 1963 the Soviets conducted twice-yearly naval exercises in the North Atlantic in increasing strength, regularly in waters off Iceland, seerving notice that the area is no longer a NATO "lake."

CITES REASON

This year, there was no spring exercise. U.S. Admiral John K. Beling, commander of the NATO base, says he believes this is because Soviet naval strength in the Atlantic, on the surface and under water, now is almost constantly at a high level.

On the political side, the Soviet operation is far more subtle.

The fiercely nationalistic Icelanders, proud of their Viking heritage, are traditionally suspicious of foreign influence after centuries of occupation by Norwegians and Danes, and briefly, during the Second World War, by the British. In exploiting the latent opposition to the 3,700 American armed servicemen at the NATO base here, the Soviets themselves have been careful to tread softly.

Novosti, a Soviet press and propaganda agency, opened an office here last year. The Soviets planned to send in about 10 Soviet citizens to staff it, but later relied on a Soviet chief and an Icelandic staff. It circulates the only foreign publication in the Icelandic language, a slick monthly magazine.

FAVOR NATO LINK

Soviet press releases and officials, actively visiting outlying communities, make capital of Icelandic opposition to the Vietnam war. Soviet demands for an end to foreign intervention in Vietnam are linked to the campaign to close the NATO base here.

Non-Communist labor union leaders say the Communist-run unions get Soviet money to hire organizers and back the local Communist party. The Icelandic government says it has no proof of this.

Icelandic officials believe public sentiment is against pulling out of NATO. For one thing, membership helped Iceland win its "cold war" with Britain in the 1950s over fishing rights in this area. Fishing accounts for 95 per cent of Iceland's export earnings.

GATHERED FROM THE FOUR CORNERS OF THE WORLD...

Woodward's FOODS

Crunchy Halibut Bake

2 lbs. B.C. Halibut
½ cup toasted wheat germ
2 tbsp. chopped almonds
1 tsp lemon rind.
1 tsp salt
¼ tsp freshly ground pepper undiluted evaporated milk butter
lemon eights
mushroom sauce

Cut halibut into serving pieces. Mix wheat germ, almonds, lemon rind, salt and pepper. Dip pieces of fish in evaporated milk and then roll in wheat germ mixture until well coated. Arrange in buttered baking dish. Dot with butter. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes per inch thickness of fish. Serve with eighths of lemon and a mushroom sauce if desired. Serves 4 to 6. This recipe is adaptable to other B.C. fish such as sole, salmon and cod.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1971 —PAGE 27

Women Man Cameras for Cable TV

No one can accuse Victoria Cablevision's Channel 10 of sexist discrimination.

Two men and two women run it's miniature television studio, and it's the two women who do most of the camera work.

"Of course, if there's a crisis, we're all there," said Catherine Barker, who also works on the other side of the cameras, as hostess of a show called Ladies First. "But there's never a crisis."

Catherine, 22, began to work with television at Cowichan Senior Secondary School in Duncan.

Doris Richardson, the other girl at the station, had no experience when she was hired last September, but picked it up quickly.

Catherine is officially known as assistant program director. She sets up the studio, writes promotions and works on the daily log as well as doing camera work. She also helps in the control room occasionally. Doris is in charge of telecine, the films the channel uses along with their live material.

The station broadcasts from 7 to 10:30 p.m. five days a week. Catherine says they average two hours of live shows a night; the rest of the local material is videotaped.

The other two crew members are Bob Aylward, program director, and Bob White.

Catherine says that of the 14 students who began the television club at Cowichan, only she and one of the boys have gone on to work in radio or television.

"But more are following it up now," she said. "Even if you don't use the knowledge later, it's good experience.

"I would advise any girl who is thinking of going into television and has a chance to take a course in school, to take it.

"The course at Cowichan is one in which the students can get really involved in what they are doing. I was takjng a commercial course and it was my elective, but I spent every spare minute at it."

Catherine has a word of caution, though.

"You have to be conscientious. I think a lot of girls go into a job and just slough around. As long as they take a pay cheque home every month, that's enough.

"In camera work, you have to be interested. Anyone can push a camera around, but you have to be interested to get a good shot. You have to co-operate with the director and the man in the control room. You have to work with a team."

CAC Urges Government To Date-Mark Perishables

HALIFAX (CP) — A system of date-marking perishable foods should be formulated that can be understood by consumers, delegates to the Consumers Association of Canada annual meeting decided Tuesday.

They approved a resolution from their Alberta and Ontario groups calling for the federal consumer affairs department to examine date-coding of perishable foods and to establish a system under which such foods would be clearly marked with the date deterioration might set in.

They also want stock rotation practices for perishable goods in retail stores inspected to ensure that the products may be safely sold.

A background statement with the resolution said that almost all food items on the shelves of grocery stores are coded with a set of numbers or letters giving the date they are manufactured or packaged or the suggested expiry date.

This was to be used by the retailer in rotating his stock, although retailers and wholesalers did not always practise good rotation.

The consumer could not generally understand these codes.

Eleanor Ordway, director of consumer services for the federal consumer affairs department, told the 150 delegates and observers at the meeting that the department now is studying current date-coding practices.

The department had sent questionnaires to manufacturers and was about to survey retail stores to discover whether outdated products were being sold.

The conference delegates also voted to ask the federal food and drug directorate to oblige pharmacists to put the name of the drug and size of dose on the instruction label of a person's prescription unless the doctor making the prescription directs him not to.

This was to enable quicker treatment for someone accidentally poisoned through misuse of a prescribed drug.

The delegates also decided that since Canada plans eventually to convert to the metric system, a decimal system of weights and measures, present sizing designations for wearing apparel should be reviewed.

It's an appalling thought that in this city of homes and gardens there are children daily being abused and battered.

Yet, it's true. Reporting on cases handled by the Family and Children's Service in the past year, executive director Gordon Wright listed 60 children taken into care because of neglect, desertion and ABUSE. And there are equally as many — perhaps more — who never reach custodial care.

Just as incredible as the though of there being abused and battered children in our city, is the thought that parents practise secret cruelties on their children.

What possesses them? Why do they do these things? What kind of stress pushes them into becoming child torturers, and why?

The complexity of the problem seems to defy clear-cut answers. Obviously, the abuses relate in some way to mental health. Just as obviously, resentments, anxieties and tension between children and parents also seem to be reasons.

But we have to go deeper than these rather glib explanations. As one social worker put it, "we must find the reasons, behind the reasons, behind the reasons, ad infinitum."

Modern living must also take its share of the blame. Included here are marriage for convenience, the fantastic divorce rate, and the liberalization of the legal interpretation of cruelty.

There's alcoholism, too, and the relative nomadism of our time, coupled with the incessant emphasis on material gain.

In this city of Victoria, (although few reach the headlines), more and more cases of child abuse are coming to light-through emergency treatment in hospitals, the excellence of x-ray facilities and mounting medical awareness and suspicion.

In a recent article on the battered child, a member of the Ontario coroner's office stated that young children were being battered to death in secret by their parents at the rate of one a month. (By now that ratio quite easily could have doubled.)

It was stated in the same article, "For every child who dies of neglect, malnutrition, or beatings, there are 100 other cases not discovered."

Which brings us to the question: How can we spot brutality or neglect soon enough to protect the child?

Certainly the Family and Children's Service is set up for this purpose, as well as the elevation of family life, through its many services. But the fact remains that such cases have to be reported in order for the FCS to be aware of the situation within the home in question.

Doctors, too, are in key positions to help. But there are almost never any witnesses to the brutal attacks on children, and since our modern-day doctors do not have the close contact with the home life of their patients, enjoyed by their intuitive forerunners, they must rely primarily on suspicions.

Because most of these children are the subject of repeated attacks and neglect is usually of long standing, teachers also are in a position to detect and report.

Finally there is you . . . and you . . . and you! It is your responsibility, if you strongly suspect or believe that a child is being battered or abused, to report it to the Family and Children's Service.

GALLUP POLL

Canadian Women Respected as Execs

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Today's feminists win a majority support for their claim that women could run most businesses as well as men, with 58 per cent saying it is a fact while 35 per cent deny it.

Women are more certain of their sex's ability in a top executive role than are men, with a two-to-one ratio saying they could. Men are more dubious about it, with a five-to-four ratio of support.

Surprisingly, younger Canadians are more doubtful about a woman's handling of the top post in a company than are older people. French-Canada has considerably more faith in a woman's ability to run a company than English-Canada.

But does a woman with equal ability have as good a chance to become an executive as a man? The debate narrows on this question, with a bare majority claiming she does not, but almost as many saying she does. Men and women agree in their attitudes, but again the younger are pessimistic with nearly a two-to-one decision that she does not. Among older Canadians, the vote is almost equal.

There is a complete reversal of opinion revealed between English and French Canada, with 63 per cent in the former saying a woman has less chance — and 63 per cent among French-speaking citizens claiming that her opportunities are just as good as a man's.

To establish the facts of public opinion on opportunities for women in business, Gallup interviewers put two questions to a national sample of adults.

"Do you think women could run most businesses as well as men or not?" "If a woman has the same ability as a man, does she have as good a chance to become the executive of a company or not?"

Here's how the public reacted nationally, compared with opinions among men and women, radical backgrounds, young and older Canadians.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What can you say to a 25-year-old daughter who has decided to live with her boy friend?

We brought Maria up as a moral Catholic. Her boy friend is of the same faith. He and his wife are legally separated. They have three children.

I have tried to tell Maria that if her friend really loved her he would get a divorce and marry her. We have other children, but Maria is the oldest and the apple of her father's eye. This affair is just about killing us. Until this happened Maria never gave us any trouble. We were so proud of her. She graduated from college with honors. Now she teaches retarded children.

We are so ashamed to face family and friends, we refuse all social events. I know Maria reads your column. Maybe there is something you can say to her. I've tried everything I know. Thank you.—Maria's Mother

DEAR MOTHER: I have nothing to say to Maria because she didn't ask me for any advice, but I have something to say to you, Mother: You reared your daughter to the best of your ability, and from your letter I would say you did a commendable job. Maria is an adult now, and you are not responsible for her decisions. Those who know you and love you will not think less of you because of your daughter's actions. Hold your head high, and if anyone attempts to needle you, say: "She is our daughter and we love her, even though we disagree on many things."

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have six daughters. Never had any boys, but all the girls are nice. My wife gets along fine with everybody. She has never said a mean word about anybody, and she won't listen to gossip. I have a pretty good job, and our home is paid for. So what's my problem? Our eldest daughter got married and she had a baby boy. When our son-in-law called and told us we had a grandson I had to help my wife sit down.

The baby can't even sit up yet and my wife has bought him shirts with "I love grandma" on the front. She also went to the jewelry store and had them put her grandson's picture on some earrings and a pin. (Have you ever seen earrings and a pin with a fat boy's picture on them?) This may seem petty to you, but I wonder if she hasn't lost her mind?—Grandpa

DEAR GRANDPA: After six girls, I don't blame her.

DEAR ABBY: I have seen several letters in your column lately about an operation called the "vasectomy" which is done on a man in order to prevent him from getting a woman pregnant.

As a male, I object. If a woman doesn't want to get pregnant, let her have an operation.

We men sacrifice enough, fighting wars and supporting kids and females, without submitting to castration. Very truly yours—All Man (Forever)

DEAR ALL MAN: It takes more of a "man" to submit to surgery than to ask his wife to do it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a domestic employee for a very prominent family and I realize that I must keep myself clean and tidy at all times, which I most certainly do.

I am a member of a church club and every Christmas the women swap gifts. Last Christmas I got a bottle of deodorant! The lady who gave it to me is a very nice person and I can't imagine why she would give me such a gift. I would never give a gift like that to anybody.

Will you please tell me what to do with the deodorant?—Perplexed.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Use it.

PRE-SCHOOL FEMINISM

Miss Muffitt Fights Back

By MYRA MACPHERSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Do you see anything wrong with this phrase from a children's book? "Boys invent things, girls use what boys invent." Or, "boys are doctors, girls are nurses." Or, a scornful boy saying "you can't play ball — you're only a girl."

If not, a growing number of women across the country would say you just aren't tuned in to rampant sexism in pre-school and elementary books.

Females of all kinds — mothers, editors, teachers, students, writers, housewives and career women — are challenging the child's-book view of women, girls and mothers.

Recent studies point out that the view is a stereotype about as realistic as a Walt Disney movie. The studies claim they stultify a young girl's aspirations, ego and incentive.

The majority of picture books show passive, dull little girls — usually in pink — playing with dolls or helping mommy wash dishes. Boys play ball, climb trees, sail boats, sled (with Dad), ride bikes (with Dad). When girls are pictured doing these things, they are immediately "tomboys," as if climbing trees were weirdly unfeminine.

Instead, girls are often depicted as unimaginative, docile and sometimes stupid clods. The typical female model for the girl is a housewife. For the boys? All kinds of daddies—and heroes — out there in the outside world.

Those who protest these images argue they are not knocking housewives and motherhood so much as the way children's books see them. Mother, generally, is as bland as if she had had a prefrontal lobotomy — an aproned, perennially cheerful cookie baker about to hand-wash a mountain of dishes. (One can only wonder whatever happened to all those automatic dishwashers sold in the real world.

Mothers in books seldom drive cars (except to the grocery store) and never read the classics or newspapers or play, with great skill, a musical instrument. Mother does not have either the strength or the ingenuity to solve any problem.

Despite the fact that millions of mothers work — labor statistics for 1970 indicate 32 per cent of North American mothers who have children under six years of age are working — in the book mother seldom works. If she does, she's a teacher or nurse, never doctor or principal.

Children's books are big business. The publishing industry's latest figures show North Americans spent $150 million on juvenile books in 1969.

This is enough to make publishers and editors twitchy when protests come. Many admit a lack of awareness about the problem; some are embarrassed, nervous or appalled at what they've been putting out.

Any sexism, they say, is done unconsciously and without malice. Books currently being processed for next year will show a big change, publishers say.

When Local members of NOW contacted Ann Seeley, children's co-ordinator for Montgomery County Library, Miss Seeley said she felt they were "looking for 'very special' interest and 'special theme' books."

She said the library would continue to look at books for overall "literary quality." She conceded, though, "I think they may have a point. Until fairly recently, working mothers or active mothers were not considered a central issue in children's books. Creative artists are always behind in these things which are sociological."

Feminists on Children's Media — a New York-based organization of women's liberation groups, professors, librarians, editors, writers, students, mothers and women in other careers — feel bad children's books are not just child's play.

"These books are a major tool in the socialization of our children. They do a great deal of damage in preventing the full development of individual potential in girls — and even in boys — because of the strict sexual stereotyping conveyed," this group reports.

After studying thousands of books for 10 months, they found 250 they would recommend for ages 3 to 15, and only about 30 of them pre-school books. The titles are printed in a bibiliography called Little Miss Muffitt Fights Back. (Available for purchase, Box 4315, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017).

Those who attack children's books run the inevitable risk of being called humorless and taking the subject too seriously.

Author Robert Kraus, who wrote the simple sentences for a cartoon pre-schooler, "I'm Glad I'm a Girl, I'm Glad I'm a Boy," says, "Anyone who takes this book that seriously is silly."

He got "some" criticism — "I call it publicity"—for such ideas as: "Boys invent things, girls use what boys invent," "Boys have trucks, girls have dolls," "Boys are doctors, girls are nurses," Boys are presidents, girls are first ladies," "Boys can eat, girls can cook."

"I can't get that excited about the criticism. The boy is as dopey as the girl. It was meant to be humorous. So what should I have said, 'The girl can be the doctor and the boy the nurse?' I'd be accused of fostering homosexuality. I certainly didn't want to put women down."

He was asked about the phrase, "Boys invent things, girls use things boys invent." He replied, "so what have girls invented lately? They invent babies. To me, one has to maintain a sense of humor."

The artist whose name is on the book, Whitney Darrow Jr., takes a different view. After being called a "sexist" in several letters since the book was published last year, Darrow said, "I shouldn't have drawn the thing. At the time, I was not happy about the thing, but I didn't think it through. It seemed sort of slight."

Feminists on Children's Media said some of the books now in the works are decided improvements. One called Just Think has a teen-age girl playing drums, shows a boy with a cowboy hat in a child-care centre holding a doll, a mother hurrying off to work.

There is even a book called Practical Princess (she rescues the prince). A girl in another book follows her grandfather's occupation and becomes a piano tuner. Still another girl with a knowledge of dinosaurs grows up to be a scientist. In Jelly Beans for Breakfast, two girls go off to the moon.

Sometimes the slight is subtle and by omission alone. A pop-up science book, Your Body, Bones and Muscles is labeled for boys and girls. Whenever the skeleton becomes a fully clothed body, it turns out to be a boy. One mother reported that her 5-year-old daughter was fascinated with the book, pulled the muscles and bones in an out, and when the mother was through reading it to her, asked, "are my bones like that boy's bones?"

KNITTING COLUMN

Batten Down That Neckline

By LOIS HOLMES

There are never too many helpful hints for good finishing on your hand knit or crocheted garments. I have an excellent tip for you which was devised by a famous studio designer, Audrey Hurst, who has just joined our staff.

When you have a wide, square neckline on a dress that is at least four inches deep and has a tendency to gap or stretch, follow these simple procedures.

After the neckline has been finished to your satisfaction, and you want to be sure that it stays that way, measure narrow flat elastic from one front corner around to the centre back.

Cut two pieces. Sew one end of each piece to the wrong side of each front corner. On the other end of each piece, sew a hook and eye, respectively. These are fastened after the dress is put on.

This will insure the constant good fitting of the neckline and it will never fall away from the chest area.

Here is another tip from my new assistant, Andrea. When knitting or crocheting a brimmed hat, it is a good idea to stabilize the inside area where crown and brim meet. With matching yarn or straw, work at least one row slip stitch on wrong side. Be sure to keep in mind desired head size.

Mrs. W. O. of Plainview, Neb., has sent me a very interesting tip on a novel way to put a slide fastener on your hand knit or crocheted garments.

Sew the slide fastener on grosgrain ribbon, but be sure that the ribbon has been washed or that you use the pre-shrunk kind.

After you have the slide fastener on the ribbon, hand stitch it securely to the sweater or garment with small even stitches. It gives a very neat finish.

Eaton's Top Furrier can add Years of Wear and Modern Styling to your Old Fur Coat, Thurs., Fri., and Sat., June 10th, 11th and 12th.

Fur, we all know, never goes out of date.
But fur coat styling can.

Lining will age. And a few rips occur. But that's no reason to give up what was initially a large investment. Eaton's top furrier, Mr. R. Cannon, will give you advice without obligation, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, on how to remodel your old fur. Make it into a contemporary dream. Or just make minor adjustments. After over forty years in the fur trade, our man Mr. Cannon knows just what to look for. Knows how much alteration can be managed. And knows all the hidden secrets on how to revitalize what may have become your second-choice coat.

For Example: A full length, large collar coat with large sleeves and cuff, matted fur, a few rips and old lining can become a modern trotter of the latest styling. Cleaned, back grooved, with modern lining. And maybe, if sufficient fur is left over, you can have a bonus cape to set off another ensemble.

Another Example: Our skilled furrier can counsel you as to how to achieve the style of your choice from an old, but still good fur with "football" shoulders, flared back and "parachute" sleeves. Reliable counsel backed by years of experience. With no obligation to you.

Meet Mr. R. Cannon
Thursday, Friday and Saturday—10:00 a.m. to 12 noon
, 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday and Friday—7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

BATTLE OF PONTIAC COUNTY

English-Speaking Residents Talk Separatism

SHAWVILLE, Que. (CP) — For decades, the English majority and French minority have coexisted quietly in Pontiac County, a huge and sparsely inhabited area of the province of Quebec running back from the north shore of the Ottawa River.

Now, concerned about the separatist movement and the provincial government's insistence on using French in official correspondence, many English-speaking Pontiac residents are talking separatism of their own.

A Shawville weekly newspaper, The Equity, asked its 2,850 subscribers to choose from four possible futures for the county. It reported that of 1,268 replies:

—603 wanted the county included in Ontario.

—391 favored inclusion of Pontiac in a national capital region.

—231 wanted Pontiac to become a new province.

—36 wanted to remain in Quebec.

Another seven had other suggestions.

Pontiac has a total population of 21,000. About 13,000 are of voting age.

IRRITATION CLAIMED

Until recent years, the county went its own way. Then measures were introduced by the provincial government to reorganize the county government. Official provincial correspondence began to be issued in French only.

Basil Quaile, warden of Pontiac County, calls the French-only policy "unbearable," arguing that only five of the 25 mayors in the county can speak and read French.

Use of French Called 'An Irritation'

The county representative in the Quebec national assembly, Liberal Jean-Guy Lariviere, says he deplores the province's persistence in using only French.

But "it's only lately, because of other fears, that people are complaining."

WOULD BE MERGED

The provincial government's proposed reform of municipal structures has also caused concern in the area.

Pontiac would be split into two municipal communities, which would then be merged with 30 other municipalities into the Outaouais Regional Community.

But Warden Quaile says the citizens' concern is mainly due to a lack of understanding, since the province has "promised that Pontiac will have special status within the new scheme."

Contributing to the lack of understanding, he feels, was a lack of English-language copies of the government's white paper on municipal reorganization.

Geography may be another factor in the desire of some residents to join Ontarrio.

The tiny village of Raides-des-Joachims sits on an island in the middle of the Ottawa River. The only access road is through Ontario, and the nearest Quebec Provincial Police detachment must drive 90 miles to get there.

The 300 villagers go to Ontario hospitals and shop in Ontario. About 60 per cent of the residents of Rapides-des-Joachims depend on welfare or pensions for survival. Others depend on jobs in the Ontario communities of Pembroke or Deep River.

ABILITY LOST

Mayor Henry Madore says the village has not even been able to get a first-aid post from the provincial government. The nearest hospital and ambulance service is in Ontario in Deep River, 16 miles away.

Most of the residents are of French ancestry, he says, but have lost the ability to speak French. Elementary education was provided only in English until a few years ago.

All in all, he said, the villagers consider it a disadvantage to live in Quebec.

Most residents say they see an English-speaking exodus as inevitable if the separatist movement should win power in the province. They say they don't want to rock the boat by complaining openly of bad relations with the provincial government, but the rumblings of discontent form an undercurrent to their daily life.

On the surface, though, life is still primarily relaxed and untroubled. Stores stay closed Mondays while most people fish in the nearby lakes and streams.

The pressures of urban density are not even a threat in quiet Pontiac, where the largest municipality, Shawville, has grown to only 2,000 persons in its 153-year history.

Prisoner Jacketed

EDMONTON (CP) — Michael Derrick Fredericks, 24, of Montreal, wearing a straitjacket, pleaded guilty in provincial court Saturday to a charge of armed robbery.

He was remanded to Friday for a pre-sentence report.

Provincial Judge Dean Saks was told Fredericks was placed in a straightjacket because he beat his head repeatedly against guard-cell walls and screamed. The judge recommended psychiatric examination.

Fredericks was charged after a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal was robbed of $480.

Old Firm Closing Down

A Victoria firm founded 72 years ago on a dray team and $100 capital is being closed out in the face of changing business techniques.

Co-owners William M. Champion, his brother Irvine R. Champion and William's son Michael M. Champion have sold their family business premises, Champion's Ltd. furniture, at Fort and Quadra.

The new owner, a Victoria businessman, is expected to redevelop the site, which was built as the plant of Pantorium, a dry cleaning firm. It also served briefly as a public library before Champion's occupies it in 1955.

William Champion Jr. said the senior partners had decided to retire from the business, which had undergone substantial change since the establishment of their firm as a specialty-type operation with more of a fixed clientele compared with today's highly-competitive, volume sales furniture business.

The original firm was founded in 1899 at 1420 Douglas by William Champion — then 19 years old — and Godrey Smith, who between them had $100 and a team. A lasting feature of the company has been its upholstering department, which may be sold intact, said William Jr.

Champion's Ltd. became the name of the store in 1935, changing from Smith and Champion, Smith having been bought out in 1923.

New commercial and office buildings and recent reconstruction of older office premises in the area of Fort, Cook and Quadra streets indicate continuing upgrading of that part of urban Victoria.

Jury Urges Approval Requirement

A coroner's jury has recommended that doctor's approval be mandatory for membership in any "health conditioning institution."

The recommendation came at the conclusion of an inquest into the death of James Gordon Shepherd, 29, of 1727 Denman, who died in hospital five days after he was found floating face down in the swimming pool at Palm Springs Health Spa, Hillside Shopping Centre.

The jury said Shepherd died accidentally as a result of a cardiac arrest while he was in the swimming pool.

Earlier testimony revealed that the victim had been warned by spa officials about floating face down in the pool while holding his breath.

A spa officials also testified that the health club did not know that Shepherd was an epileptic. The man's doctor said Shepherd suffered the affliction.

Another recommendation of the jury was that no publication of the proceedings of a coroner's inquest be made by news media until the hearing had concluded.

There was no reason given for this recommendation.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said this would require provincial legislation to change the Coroner's Act because at present there is no restriction on the reporting of inquest proceedings.

OFFICIAL ANTHEM URGED BY CLUB

The Association of Canadian Clubs has reaffirmed its support for the monarchy in Canada and prodded the federal government to act on the institution of an official, distinctive national anthem.

The moves were taken Tuesday in resolutions passed at the end of the three-day biennial conference of the organization, held at the Empress Hotel.

In the resolution supporting the monarchy, members stated the Crown was an important factor in protecting the rights of minorities in a modern democracy; providing a personal head of state above political considerations.

Urging action on a national anthem, the members referred to a special joint committee of both houses, representing all parties, that made unanimous recommendations on national and royal anthems in February 1968. No legislation followed and Tuesday's resolution called for immediate government action on the 1968 findings.

Mme. Georges P. Vanier was elected president of the association, succeeding Dr. N. A. M. MacKenzie.

Regional vice-presidents are: British Columbia, A. W. S. Mortifee of Vancouver; Prairies, Mrs. E. M. Bredin of Calgary; Ontario, Mrs. O. J. McCullough of Toronto; Quebec, L. Yves Fortier of Montreal; Maritimes, Dr. C. B. Ferguson of Halifax.

Duncan C. Campbell of Montreal was elected chairman of the national executive. The honorary treasurer is Mrs. W. M. Benidickson of Ottawa.

SUMMER SCHEDULE

The summer service schedule for Washington State ferry runs between Sidney, the San Juan Islands and Anacortes goes into effect Sunday.

From then until Sept. 7 there will be three daily sailings, leaving Sidney at 11 a.m., 2 and 4:45 p.m. The 2 p.m. sailing will not be run on Sundays or American holidays.

Bonn Interest In B.C. Low

Baron von Mirbach, German ambassador to Canada, could give Premier Bennett no assurance that German industry was interested in locating here when the two met Tuesday.

The ambassador said later that Bennett had asked if German capital and industry could be attracted to British Columbia.

"But," said the ambassador, "our industrialists want to stay closer to the larger concentrations of population.

"It may be that some concerns could be attracted — possibly tool makers — but we will have to look into that."

Explaining that the trade balance between Canada and Germany is about equal, Von Mirbach foresaw no difficulty as far as Canda is concerned in the international monetary crisis surrounding the German mark and the U.S. dollar.

RECESSION

But he did forecast a slight recession in the German economy — not too serious. He didn't expect the voluntary wage controls between his government and Germany's industrial unions to last.

Those most likely to be affected if there was a recession, he added, would be foreign workers who have flooded into Germany to fill jobs created through the booming economy.

Unofficial estimates show as many as 5,000,000 foreign workers in German plants could be affected if conditions changed.

Discussing the current political situation in Germany, Von Mirbach said most Germans welcome the prospect of easing tensions with the east but he stressed that Berlin is still the key issue to be resolved.

CONGRESS TESTIMONY

FBI Has 53 Bugs—Hoover

By KEN W. CLAWSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — FBI surveillance on subversion and organized crime has remained stable since last March, when FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover reported that a total of 47 telephone taps and 6 hidden microphones were in use, the justice department said Tuesday night.

Hoover said then — according to testimony released Tuesday — that as of March 1, Attorney General John N. Mitchell had authorized and the FBI had installed 33 telephone taps and 4 bugging devices in national security cases.

He added that the FBI was operating 14 telephone taps and two microphone devices against organized crime. These surveillances were approved by the courts, he said, which had also authorized another 12 telephone taps against crime syndicate figures.

HOOVER
. . . testifies

Hoover disclosed the wiretap and bugging figures in testimony March 17 before a House Appropriations Subcommittee considering the FBI's fiscal 1972 budget request of $318.6 million.

Tuesday night justice department officials said the FBI is at present operating "less than 50" telephone taps and bugging devices in the national security field, all authorized by Attorney General Mitchell.

The officials said the FBI has 16 telephone taps but no hidden microphones currently operating under court approval against organized crime.

In his testimony Hoover did not distinguish between alleged domestic and foreign subversion. Mitchell contends that his approval alone is required for eavesdropping on all subversion. Others have challenged his right to wiretap alleged domestic subversives, and the Supreme Court now has the question under review.

RED CROSS SOCIETY

Clinic on Water Safety

The Canadian Red Cross Society's water safety service will hold a requalification clinic for water safety instructors Sunday, June 20 at 9 a.m. in the Gordon Head Recreation Centre, 1744 Feltham.

Applications are available at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort.

Open to instructors who qualified or requalified between Jan. 1, 1966 and Dec. 31, 1969, the clinic will have a pool session from 9 to 10 a.m., discussion from then until noon, followed by another hour in the pool. Further discussion will take place from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. and final pool session, 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Participants should bring notebook, swim suit, Red Cross water safety instructor card, Royal Life Saving Society instructor card if they have one, and their latest Royal Life Saving Society award card.

Clinic fee is $5.

Serviceman Receives Merit Award

CPO F. J. Colclough, 1637 Amphion, has become the first serviceman in the Pacific command to receive a $1,000 award under the Canadian forces' merit award program, initiated three years ago.

A naval spokesman said today the Oak Bay man received the award because of the example, foresight and work done by him during his 20 years of service.

The spokesman said that Colclough's leadership had resulted in reducing costs of refit and running maintenance of the destroyer-escort HMCS St. Croix, in which Colclough serves on hull maintenance.

500TH TIME WINS DRUNK DISCHARGE

LEEDS, England (CP) — George Linstrum, 78, who admitted being drunk, was given an absolute discharge by Yorkshire magistrates at its was a special occasion — his 500th appearance for the same offence.

Before the Judge

An 18-year-old chambermaid was fined $400 in court Tuesday by Judge Edmond St. Jorre when she pleaded guilty to stealing a diamond ring from a guest staying at the motel where she was employed.

Maria Elder, 2838 Parkview, court was told, found the ring, valued at $450, Saturday when it fell out of some laundry. She took it home.

A city policeman said a Tacoma woman staying at the motel had reported the ring missing. The accused, he said, admitted the offence to police Monday.

Dennis Gerald Seeley, 26, of 1430 Stadacona, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for imperied driving.

Robinson also ordered a three-month driving ban.

THX 1138 Just Too Far Out

Exercise In the Dominance Of Machines

peter mcnelly movies

The 1984 scare doesn't scare me. First, I don't believe it. Second, I like computers.

So how can I be fair to a movie like George Lucas' THX 1138? It's a brilliant exercise about the total reduction of the human personality before the dominance of machines.

Lucas, 27, directed and edited the film as well as co-authoring the script. This is his first feature film. Given some money, he shows how technically proficient he is.

Lucas' movie can be reviewed solely on its visual merits, and they are considerable. Some of its scenes resemble abstract pop art designs.

REJECT FLESH

The result of all this programmed big-brotherism is quite frightening. And that is where I get off.

Isn't it obvious that we'd hate technology city and the brain police? Isn't it obvious that 1984 is an old story?

Is Lucas suggesting that machines are going to take over and create a regime of organized terror? If he is, does anyone seriously believe it? I don't.

What bugs me about THX 1138 takes a romantic cop-out The best science fiction projects human and social problems into the future. THX 1139 takes a romantic cop-out by concentrating on basic emotions — love and the desire to be free.

Surely men are more complicated than that. I'd bet we destroy ourselves before anything like Lucas' vision takes over.

But don't base your decision to see this movie on what I've been saying. This article is more a discussion than a review, because it's pointless to dissect THX 1138 and say, "This is good and that's weak; the action could have been better but the photography is marvellous."

Anyone who has seen Jean-Luc Godard's Alphaville might ask himself whether the French director did a better job with the same theme by leaving many contemporary images, in his movie.

Alphaville kept coming back to earth with shots of high-rise buildings and not-so-fantastic gadgetry. THX 1138 is so far out that it's just unacceptable.

I don't care if it is a gas to watch.

Dahlia Project Complete

The centennial project of the Victoria Gladiola and Dahlia Society was completed this week with the last planting of 150 dahlias in a display garden at the entrance to Saanich's Municipal Recreation Centre in Lambrick Park.

The project received the co-operation of Saanich council and parks board.

The plants, mostly Dutch varieties, were donated by the members, some plants of American origin coming from affiliated clubs in Washington and Oregon.

Mayor Hugh Curtis and members of his council will be present when the garden is dedicated in a special ceremony Aug. 4 and officially opened.

The date of the ceremony was chosen in order to have the plants in full bloom.

Plans call for the garden to be eventually used as a trial garden where new varieties — seedlings — will be grown and tested under local weather and soil conditions.

The Victoria Centennial Committee has donated a trophy to be known as the Centennial Award, which will go to the originator of the best seedling at the society's show.

To celebrate the group's 25th anniversary, a special show will be held at the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre Aug 14 and 15.

PAT GALLOWAY BIG SUCCESS

Comedienne Turns to Tragedy

By VICTOR STANTON

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Pat Galloway established herself as a dramatic actress of major stature with a tour-de-force performance in Tuesday night's Stratford Festival opening of John Webster's The Duchess of Malfi.

As a follow-up, Miss Galloway plays Lady Macbeth tonight in Shakespeare's Macbeth, the other tragedy being presented at the Festival Theatre during the festival's 19th season.

The season got under way Monday night with a production of the Shakespearean comedy Much Ado About Nothing. A production of Ben Jonson's Volpone, a comedy, opens July 27.

Miss Galloway, whose past performances in comedies and revues had almost stereotyped her as a stage comedienne, makes of the superficially-written duchess a real-life woman of flesh and blood and, most important, soul.

BASED ON MURDER

Directed by Jean Gascon, the festival's artistic director since 1968, the Stratford company presented the stark violence-filled Jacobean murder and revenge drama in the style most likely intended by the playwright.

The action of the play, set in 16th-century Italy and based on a true-life murder of a duchess by her brothers, one a duke, the other a cardinal, includes eight onstage murders — by strangulation, poisoning, poignard and sword — one murder offstage, the torturing of the duchess by surrounding her with madmen and presenting her with a severed hand and wax dummies, represented as the bodies of her husband and child.

In the Stratford production, the brothers are played by William Needles and Roland Hewgill; Barry MacGregor plays the husband and Powys Thomas plays the hired murderer Bosola.

Comments by other critics included:

DuBarry Campau, Toronto Telegram: Miss Galloway's . . . was a brilliant performance, one of the finest to have been seen in Stratford in many seasons. . . . The physical direction which Jean Gascon gave to the play was excellent. The pace of the scenes was well-balanced and the action perfectly timed."

Zelda Heller, Montreal Star: "It is not the parts of this production that make it so important and so powerful —it is the whole, the live concept brought to dark and potent life. Like a three-hour visit with some dark and overwhelming lover, it leaves the spectator exhausted, a little awed by its life-force, and somehow fulfilled."

Urjo Kareda, Toronto Star: "Pat Galloway . . . moves from being the most stylish comedienne in Canadian theatre to become a heroic actress of immense magnetism. . . . There is a persuasive ensemble feeling about the production, ensuring fluidity of pace and a confident sense of the play's shape. . . . Cheers for John Webster, Jean Gascon and Pat Galloway: It was an exciting evening."

Herbert Whittaker, Toronto Globe and Mail: "Gascon . . . has brought the three endless acts of revenge tragedy to us with an ease, clarity . . . taste, disemmination and, yes, even despatch."

Frank Morriss, Winnipeg Tribune: "Pat Galloway . . . reaches a peak of her career in the title role of the Duchess of Malfi. . . . As a stunning melodrama, with the plus factor of human warmth, this (production) ranks as one of the best in the theatre's distinguished history."

Previn Score Dropped

LONDON (Reuter) — A score written by American conductor-composer Andre Previn for a movie starring his wife, actress Mia Farrow, has been dropped by Columbia Pictures because it was unsuitable.

Associate producer Barry Appleby told reporters: "No one seemed to like it."

The music was written for a movie to be called See No Evil in which Miss Farrow plays a blind girl unwittingly involved in murder.

Composer Elmer Bernstein has been assigned the job of writing new music.

SAILOR HEAVES PAY INTO SEA

OBAN, Scotland (UPI) — Sailor Ian McIntyre was tossing old newspapers, magazines and letters into the Atlantic when suddenly he realized his pay packet with $45.60 in crisp notes had been committed to the deep.

He told his captain, Robert MacEachern, master of the lighthouse supply ship, MacEachern ordered the craft turned around and "after a good mile and half, one of the crew spotted the little green envelope bobbing on the waves."

A small boat was lowered and the packet recovered. "It was amazing luck," the captain said.

End War Demand

WASHINGTON — Under a blazing June sun, about 400 lawyers, tourists and newsmen gathered Tuesday at the west steps of the U.S. Capitol to hear demands that Congress legislate an end to the Vietnam war by Dec. 31.

The rally was billed as the main attraction in two days of anti-war activity by members of the most prestigious firms in the U.S. and this city's legal establishment.

But the attendance fell about 2,100 under the 2,500 estimated in the permit authorizing the event.

ORGAN RECITAL TONIGHT

A young organist who has just completed her third year in the Bachelor of Music program at University of Victoria will be the organ recitalist at the church of St. John the Divine this evening.

Frances Carter began her career in church music at the age of 16 as organist and choir director of a small rural church in Surrey, later becoming assistant organist at Queen's Avenue United Church, New Westminster.

She is currently organist and choir master at the Church of Our Lord, Humboldt Street, and director of the newly-formed Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Rainbow chorus.

Miss Carter, who has given recitals in Vancouver and Victoria, will play works by Buxtehude, Pachelbel, Franck, Vierne and Whitlock.

Assisting in the recital wil be harpist Kathryn Ely.

Mrs. Ely, who holds a Bachelor of Music degree in harp from the University of Illinois and who taught and played in the symphony in Honolulu, has studied with the greatest harpists including Marcel Grandjany.

She is the wife of French horn player Richard Ely, and both are principals with the Victoria Symphony and teach at Uvic and the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Mrs. Ely has chosen to play works by Debussy, Tournier and Salzedo in tonight's recital which begins at 7:30 p.m.

Classical Program

Artist members of the Catherine Wendol Vocal Studio will participate in a unique program of classical song at Craigdarroch Castle Friday.

Each of the seven singers will be accompanied in obligati by a different instrument, thus forming a triple partnership with piano accompaniment by Mary Ducker.

The singers and their instrumental partners are Lynden Hart with violinist Robert Winquist; Karen Smith with oboist Hilary Frost; Rosemary Thorne with cellist Kent Millar; Carla Levinson with flutist Jane Pearce; Andrea Mellis with violist Elizabeth Bredberg; Nan Long with harpist Lorna Langley, and Erika Kurth with trumpeter Boyde Hood.

They will perform art songs and arias by Mozart, Bach, Brahms, Bizet, Arnold Bax, Michael Head, Reynaldo Hahn and Johann Paul Martini.

Eric Nicol Farce

Victoria Theatre Guild plays host to the Duncan Drama Club Friday and Saturday at Langham Court Theatre.

The production brings Duncan actors to the Guild stage in Eric Nicol's hilarious farce, The Fourth Monkey. The play is set in one of the smaller Gulf Islands and is about a poet surrounded by "splendid isolation" and a recalcitrant housekeeper with an unusual avocation.

First produced by Vancouver Playhouse, the play had a highly successful run. It was chosen by the Duncan club as a centennial gesture toward "Canadianism."

Club president, David Skinner, reports that it was exceptionally well received during its performances in the home city.

Directed by Johanna Deleeuw, it has in the cast Pat Boulanger, Alison Evans, David Skinner, Dorothy Smith, Lorin Higley, Will McKenzie, Nigel Turner, Greg Finnighan, David Kemp and Charlotte Moore.

Curtain time both evenings is 8 p.m.

CBS QUIZZES IMMIGRANTS

Quality of Canadian Life Attracts

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS's 60 Minutes wound up its season of excellent programs with a look at the current immigration, at the rate of about 25,000 a year, from the United States to Canada.

The immigrants are middle-class families moving north to escape crowded cities and schools, noise, pollution, violence and high taxes. Those interviewed talked of Canada's "easier pace," "quality of life," lack of racial discrimination and business opportunities.

Morley Safer, doing the commentary, is a Canadian originally from Toronto who said he came to the United States in the days when it was believed that "the American dream" was to be realized south of the border.

The program Tuesday night also took a brief and somewhat alarming look at the operation of private pension funds in the United States.

Mike Wallace quoted a recent U.S. Senate study which found that some 10 million persons may never receive money from pension funds into which they have put money. The principal reason, he said, is that pension "credits" are lost when an employee changes jobs. He must start making new credits with his new job.

An estimated $130 billion is tied up in private pension funds and more than 30,000 of them are on file with the government. Many are handled well, but some are grossly mismanaged, by unions and by corporations, Wallace said. When a large manufacturer of automobiles went out of business five years ago, many younger employees received nothing from the fund.

Few workers, Wallace said, bother to find out what their pension plan provides.

DIRTIEST SHOW GETS COVERED

LONDON (CP) — The cast of the nude comedy the Dirtiest Show in Town covered themselves before the show started its run in the West End. Although the men and women appear naked and simulate intercourse they decided the stage slopes dangerously and they might injure themselves — so they trooped into the nearest insurance agency.

The Post Office introduces a new idea in mail delivery. Assured Mail.

Reliable.

If you mail early in the day, the Post Office will assure you of next-day-delivery (not Saturdays, Sundays or holidays) for first-class letters to most major Canadian cities as far as Winnipeg.

At no extra cost.

Two deadlines-10:30 am and 2:30 pm.

Forget the old multiple pick-up times on mail boxes. Instead, there will be two mailing deadlines.

Before 10:30 am-Any mail box, any day.

If you post your first-class mail before 10:30 am in any Victoria mail box, red or striped, the Post Office will assure you of next-delivery-day service to all centres shown on the card below. Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and most major cities in Eastern Canada will receive second-delivery-day service.

Between 10:30 am and 2:30 pm-Striped boxes only, except Sundays and holidays.

We realize that 10:30 am is pretty early in the day to have the mail ready, especially for businessmen, so we've designed special striped boxes for most major thoroughfares.

If you mail first-class letters between 10:30 am and 2:30 pm in one of these striped boxes, we will be able to assure you of next-delivery-day service to centres shown in blue on the card below. Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and most major cities in Eastern Canada will receive second-delivery-day service.

We're just beginning.

The Canadian Press Wire Service's reaction to the Toronto launch was, "Hey, it works!" They mailed letters in Toronto to all their major bureaus across Canada. In all cases the letters were delivered the next day.

Since then, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver have joined the program.

Assured Mail is now working for you. And just as soon as we can, it will be available in most cities in Canada.

You can rest assured.
For information and inquiries call: 388-3141.

Plight of the Prairie Farmer Raises Dust in Parliament

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA (CP) — A heated debate on the plight of the Prairie farmer turned the Commons into at least a four-day battleground Tuesday as the government and the three opposition parties attacked each other's policies.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis, with Conservative support, charged the government with deliberately seeking to drive farmers off the land and into overcrowded cities.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, accused the NDP of holding up a $100 million government payment to western farmers so that they would have a better chance in the June 23 Saskatchewan election against the provincial Liberal government.

He also accused Conservatives of obstruction and both opposition parties of seeking to spread hopelessness among Prairie farmers.

Interspersed with the main broadsides was Social Credit criticism of all other parties, Conservative sniping at the NDP and potshots by Independent Roch LaSalle (Joliette) at Conservatives and New Democrats.

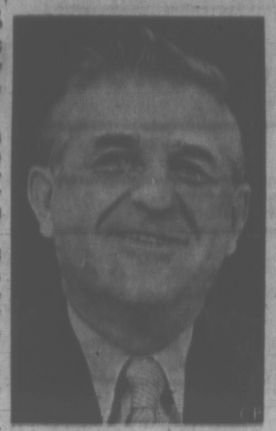
MOTION HITS LIBERALS

The House was discussing an NDP non-confidence motion condemning government agricultural policy and calling for an immediate payment of $100 million to Prairie farmers.

The motion was defeated 108 to 68, with the three opposition parties arrayed against the government. Mr. LaSalle, a former Conservative MP, voted with the Liberals.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 151, Conservative 72, NDP 24, Social Credit 13, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 1.

Mr. Lewis, opening the debate, said Liberal policies "are deliberately designed to induce farmers to go off their land, to hasten the demise of the independent Canadian farmer, to make farming the preserve of powerful corporations—in short to tear the very heart from Western Canada and to chase farmers into overcrowded and polluted urban centres."



LEWIS
. . . farmers driven off

"Malicious nonsense," Mr. Lang interjected.

FACE INCOME DROP

Mr. Lewis said western farmers are faced with truly distressing and shattering drops in income—in 1970 the average farm had net income of less than $1,000 from farming operations.

The New Democrat leader said Saskatchewan electors have the right to know where political parties in the House stand on agricultural policy and the need for an immediate injection of cash into the western economy.

Mr. Lewis noted that a government bill now before committee would pay $100 million to Prairie farmers. But, he said, the payment was blackmail since it would be paid only after the rest of the bill—setting up a farm income stabilization fund—was passed.

Mr. Lang said the NDP motion was designed to counter valid criticisms in Saskatchewan that New Democrats are blocking the government's planned payment to farmers.

He said a New Democrat MP had assured NDP workers in the Saskatchewan election campaign that the $100 million would be held up until after the election.

Mr. Lewis said, "I make no bones about it" when challenged that the motion was tied to the Saskatchewan election campaign.

Conservative Jack Horner (Crowfoot), on the other hand, "needs no motive for obstruction," the minister said.

He accused the opposition of seeking to inspire hopelessness and frustration among farmers by misrepresenting the government's policies.

LANG
. . . 'nonsense'

"No one in this House has a better opinion of the importance of farming and of farm life than the minister of agriculture and I have," said Mr. Lang.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson accused Mr. Lewis of leaving the unfair impression that agriculture of all sorts from coast to coast suffered last year, when in fact many commodities enjoyed a good year.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said his talks with Prairie farmers convinced him they are doing their best to cope with a difficult situation.

CAOUETTE COMMENTS

"This government in itself is a catastrophe from the point of view of the worker, the businessman, the hundreds of thousands of unemployed who are walking our streets and the farmer. . . . This government has dragged down agriculture just as it has dragged down the economy as a whole."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said it is not only the Prairie farmer who is suffering hardships.

Mr. LaSalle said Conservative and New Democrat MPs should end their delaying tactics and permit rapid passage of the government's agriculture legislation.

R. R. Southam (PC—Qu'Appelle - Moose Mountain) took a swipe at NDP Leader Lewis, calling him a high-priced labor lawyer whose party has traditionally been more concerned with labor unions than with the needs of farmers.

Former New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) got in the last word before the vote as he criticized Mr. Lang:

"The hopelessness which hangs like a pall over western agriculture is due to the policies and the fumbling and the bumbling of the minister himself."

VD Cases On Rise In City

One hundred and four cases of venereal disease were treated in Greater Victoria during the first five months of this year in contrast to 76 cases for the same period last year.

The figures, presented at a meeting of the Greater Victoria metro health board meeting Tuesday, represent a 37 per cent increase. There was an over-all increase of 26 per cent throughout the province for the same period.

Both this year and last, gonorrhoea cases outnumber syphilis about 10 to one, says the report by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer.

"There has been some publicity with regard to possible failure of penicillin in the treatment of venereal disease," says the report.

"This has not been evident in British Columbia.

"The failure rate with regard to both Ampicillin and Tetracycline is two per cent, while retreatment with one or the other antibiotic results in a satisfactory cure."

Grant Level Urged

Saanich finance committee recommended Tuesday night that municipal grants to charities not exceed half a mill per year.

The decision was made after considering tables of figures on growth of the grants in recent years.

In 1965, $34,967 was doled out and this represented one-fifth of a mill when the Uvic stadium maintenance and Mount Douglas Park grants were excluded.

In 1971, $82,890 was given away and this represented half a mill.

If council approves the recommendation, councils in each year would be restricted to giving away half a mill to charities but the dollar amount would increase from year to year as the value of a mill climbs.

Pakistan Fund Starts

VANCOUVER (CP)—An East Pakistan relief fund was formed Tuesday at a meeting of civic officials from Burnaby and Vancouver and representatives from Oxfam and the Central Council of Churches.

Erwin Swangard, former managing editor of the Vancouver Sun who spent many months in development work in Nigeria, was named chairman of the fund. Vice-chairmen are Ald. Allan Emmot of suburban Burnaby and Vancouver Ald. Brian Calder.

Mr. Swangard said the fund will be used to help alleviate the suffering of the refugees in India and East Pakistan, currently suffering from a cholera epidemic.

Meanwhile, the head office of the Save The Childrn Fund in London telephoned its Vancouver office Tuesday asking for emergency funds to help East Pakistan refugees.

Mill Gets Injunction

MACKENZIE, B.C. (CP) — Striking members of the International Woodworkers of America, employed at the Finlay Forest Industries mill, are expected to return to work today following the issuance of a Supreme Court injunction ordering them back to work.

The IWA workers had refused to cross picket lines set up by 28 members of the International Pulp Sulphite Brotherhood, who are in the fifth day of a strike in a dispute over cost of living allowances.

Hearing Aid Act Effective July 1

A cabinet order approved Monday and released Tuesday announced July 1 as the proclamation date for the act which was passed in the legislature this spring.

The acts sets up a board of at least seven members responsible for the education and licencing of hearing aid dealers.

It also defines the testing that a hearing aid dealer may perform on a patient.

CRACKDOWN URGED ON UNLISTED DOGS

Saanich council will be asked to approve a crackdown on dog owners who have failed to purchase licences.

The scheme, recommended by finance and legislative committee on Tuesday night, would see commissioned agents round up dog licence fees. The commission would be 25 per cent.

Fees are $5 for male and spayed female dogs and $15 for unspayed females.

Ald. Edward Lumm said the scheme would provide information on how many dogs there are in Saanich.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he doesn't know why poundkeepers don't go through files to check on residents who haven't renewed licences.

Park Limits Sacred

A special committee of Saanich council recommended Tuesday that the municipality not sell six acres at the northest corner of Cedar Hill Park for playing fields for a planned secondary school.

At the same time, the committee recommended that Saanich meet with the Greater Victoria School District to try to solve its problems of a new school site.

CHEK-TV PROPERTY

The committee was told the school district is interested in the CHEK-TV property at the end of Epsom Drive for the school, which the district originally planned to be located at the south end of Cedar Hill Park.

Council had expressed willingness to consider the south end for a school site and was planning a community centre alongside it.

Assistant municipal engineer John Cowlin said he could see "an easy $100,000" needed to rebuild roads if the school goes into the CHEK-TV site.

GOLF COURSE

Other problems, if playing fields were located in the park, would include redesign of the golf course — the 9th green and 10th fairway would be lost — and the effect on a wildlife sanctuary pond.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said the boundaries at the north end of the park are sacred.

"This land was purchased at great expense by the people of Saanich for open space. To alienate for a school is wrong to my point of view," he said.

His comments were echoed by other committee members.

Saanich Police To Check Noise Problem

The police department in Saanich will be asked to report on a noise problem voiced by W. E. Greenwood, 1738 Feltham Road, whose house is alongside Lambrick Way at the entrance to the Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

He wrote to the indoor recreation committee that Lambrick Way is 15 feet from a bedroom window. Cars arrive at the recreation centre at 7:30 a.m. and the last leave a 11 p.m. and when there is a dance it is 2 a.m., he said.

"It is impossible to leave the window open, never mind sleep. It has devalued my property and taken away my privacy," he said.

Ice Surface Plan Reconfirmed

Saanich's Cedar Hill recreation study committee decided Tuesday to confirm its previous recommendation that the final phase in the municipal recreation program be an ice surface.

The committee was asked to reconsider its earlier recommendation by council.

The 1967 recreation referendum provided for spending $260,000 for a "community centre, McRae property." The McRae property now is called Cedar Hill Park.

A move to have the municipal administrations check the legality of moving from this specific site, "if necessary," was defeated in a tied vote.

There had been suggestions that a better site would be Lambrick Park, where the Gordon Head Recreation Centre is located. Others said a commitment was made to voters in 1967 for the Cedar Hill area. This met the retort that the commitment was for a community centre and this was being changed to an ice surface.

Ald. William Campbell moved that the site be the south end of Cedar Hill Park. But this found no seconder.

"This means we cannot resolve the issue," said committee chairman Ald. Alan Newberry. "Council will have to resolve it."

Four community representatives, who have no vote, were asked their opinion on the ice surface. Three were opposed and one was in favor.

B.C. TALENT. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8. This is the first of two shows taped in the CHAN-TV studios in Vancouver. The shows are provincial semi-finals of the Centennial Search for Talent.

THE MEN FROM SHILOH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). A woman writer (Beth Brickel) for the New York World and Colonel MacKenzie (Stewart Granger) are kidnapped by Comancheros headed by Sosentes (Ricardo Montalban). He blames the writer for inciting attacks on them by nightriders. The colonel is released to negotiate, but runs into an uncompromising sheriff.

TO ROME WITH LOVE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun). Alison (Joyce Menges) falls for the son of an Austrian countess who has been dating her. But the family soon learns from the boy's mother (Victoria Shaw) that she is nearly destitute, and that she wants only a rich girl for her son.

DES O'CONNOR SHOW. 9 p.m., Channel 5. This pleasant hour is in its second summer season continues its entertaining momentum with the second straight appearance of Jack Benny as a special guest. Jack not only does a monologue, but also some funny routines with versatile O'Connor. Des also sings "The Lost Shepherd," "The Tip of My Fingers" and "To Be the One You Love," as well as joining the New Faces for "Look What They've Done to My Song, Ma." Regular Connie Stevens sings the oldie, "The Whiffenpoof Song."

FOUR-IN-ONE. 10 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). Rod Serling's Night Galley features Joanna Pettet, Louis Hayward and Agnes Moorehead. In "The House," Joanna is released from a sanitarium, and finds the house that has been involved in her recurring nightmares. In a second episode, Louis Hayward plays a doctor who calulatingly cares for his wealthy, but invalid sister, Miss Moorehead.

NFL ACTION. 10:30 p.m., Channel 4. Some of the game's top stars are shown in off-field pursuits. Walt Garrison, Dallas running back, for instance, spends the off-season as a part-time bronco buster in a rodeo. Carl Eller of Minnesota is shown in acting school. And when Ben Davidson (Oakland lineman) is not playing football, he roams the countryside on his motorcycle.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

11:00: Channel 13: Hold That Woman (1940 comedy). James Dunn, Frances Gifford. Highly entertaining comedy concerning the troubles of two bill collectors.

11:30: Channel 7: Money, Women and Guns (1958 western). Jock Mahoney, Kim Hunter. When an old prospector is murdered, his will specifies four people as beneficiaries; a detective goes after the heirs and the killer.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Throughout my medical life, I have been distressed whenever I have seen a child, often a pretty little girl, getting a bad hunch back, plus some lateral twist to her spine, which if not corrected will cause her great misery for the rest of her life. This type of disease, called kypho-scoliosis, is often so hard to correct that many orthopedists hate to tackle the job.

I am happy to read an article by Drs. John H. Moe and David N. Kettleson, of the University of Minnesota Health Science Centre in Minneapolis, who say that in their experience, on the average, about three years of using the "Milwaukee brace" can go far to keep the spine from collapsing and deforming the child. They found that usually the child had to wear the brace until the end of the adolescent growth spurt, although a few youngsters with a milder curvature of the spine needed to wear the brace only part of the time. The doctors admit that some children pull the brace off, and refuse to use it. A few orthopedists will operate, and fasten a metal rod to the bones of the spine, with the hope of keeping them in line.

CHARMING WATERFRONT HIDEAWAY
On 10 mile point, on the shores of Cadboro Bay, amongst the trees and plantings is a most charming vine covered hidden cottage, not even visible from the road. From either the dining room or the bright 18'x21½' living room with brick fireplace, large windows afford the most fantastic of views. And, of course there's the patio, set amid the rock gardens and perched above the beach. It's absolutely beautiful! A lovely bay windowed bedroom is on the main floor (DR could be a 2nd bedroom, the spacious modern kitchen has eating space) and another very nice view bedroom is in the part basement. Wall to wall carpeting is throughout. Furnace, roof, plumbing and wiring have all been replaced and there is a new vanity bathroom. This just has to be one of Victoria's most fantastic locations. Asking $39,900.

Canadomes Bring Rulers to People

OTTAWA (CP) — Information Canada is making an all-out effort to bring the federal government to the people this summer with travelling exhibits housed in three enormous geodesic domes.

Designed by Chris Wells of Ottawa, the 35-foot-high domes, which require three trucks to transport them from place to place, will be manned by students, 10 for each dome.

The exhibit is intended to give people a better understanding of government and how the individual can actively participate and affect change within a federal system.

The first part uses cartoons and comic strips to illustrate how many people view the government. A huge hand extends from the Peace Tower into a taxpayer's pocket in one display. A tangled mess of red tape falls on the head of a citizen in another.

Further along, a "People Wall" has large two-dimensional cutouts of individuals protesting against the government on every subject from foreign investment to social welfare. Directly across is the "Problem Wall" where problems such as pollution, housing and traffic are illustrated on a screen.

FEDERAL SYSTEM

From there the visitor arrives at the Infernal Machine representing the federal system. The machine is activated with large turning wheels representing the different levels of government from federal to municipal.

The visitor is then confronted with a mirror showing himself surrounded by slogans such as It's Your Government, Stand Up and Be Counted and What Do You Want.

The next part of the exhibit shows how the individual can participate in his government.

Finally the exhibit features special telephones which the visitor can use to ask a question of Information Canada or of his MP. The requests are stored on tape and then sent to Ottawa.

The first Canadome will tour seven Ontario cities; the second, seven Quebec and one New Brunswick city; and the third will be located at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver.

Utah Water Still Under Negotiation

The federal government is still negotiating with Utah Construction and Mining Co. Ltd. to protect the salmon run and spawning grounds on Marble River and Alice Lake, Rod Hourston, director of the Pacific Region Fisheries department, said today.

He was replying to a charge made by naturalist Elton A. Anderson that senior governments did not take adequate steps to safeguard the fish when Utah was granted a water licence to divert 17,971,200 gallons of water a day from Marble River.

The river is situated near Rupert Inlet where Utah has been granted permission to dump 9.3 million gallons of mine effluent.

LAKE LEVEL

Anderson also expressed concern that salmon beds would be damaged if the company is allowed to raise the level of the lake.

Hourston said his department is looking into the possibility of storing the water for the mine at Victoria Lake instead of Alice Lake, the source of Marble River.

Anderson has advocated storing water in Victoria Lake as it would not effect the salmon.

TESTS MADE

The fisheries director said the department is also conducting a hydro-metric survey of the whole watershed to determine the best location for storing the water without harming the fish.

He said Utah contributed funds for this survey.

"Nothing is settled yet," he added, "Utah obtained the water licences to protect itself — to ensure it would obtain water for the operation of its mines."

MAN'S NOSE OUT OF JOINT

HATFIELD BROAD OAK, England (UPI) — pensioner Jack Brooks thinks the sign outside his village reading "Hatfield, B. O." stinks and he has complained to county authorities.

"B.O. had odorous overtones because of the TV soap advertisement," Brooks said. "The sign is a slur on this lovely village. It could embarrass visitors and give the place a bad name."

Union Wants Benefits Insured

The British Columbia Government Employees' Union wants the provincial government to insure that 6,000 civil servants do not lose unemployment insurance benefits.

The union has asked the government to appoint a cabinet committee to study the impact of proposed changes in federal legislation on unemployment insurance.

In B.C. about 6,000 ferries, highways and forestry workers have unemployment insurance coverage. Many of these are hired on a temporary or a casual basis.

BCGEU General Secretary John Fryer said today the union fears that the federal legislation could mean no coverage for the 6,000 civil servants. This is because Ottawa is proposing and "all-in or all-out" formula for government workers.

"If Ottawa refuses to amend the legislation," Fryer said, "the provincial government will be forced to drop coverage for the 6,000 employees or put all of its 25,000 civil servants and departmental employees on unemployment insurance."

Speech Winner

A grade seven student at St. Patrick's School, Patricia Doyle, 13, won the provincial finals of the Knights of Columbus' public speaking contest, held at the recent K of C B.C. state convention in Vernon.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Doyle, 4435 Shelbourne, she spoke on abortion, titling her speech The Crime of Our Times.

Ottawa Boosts City Crisis Line With Youth Grant

Victoria's crisis line — NEED — has received a boost from the federal government.

The government's Opportunities for Youth program has provided a grant of $7,750 for the service to hire a full-time student co-ordinator and 20 part-time student workers to supplement regular staff for three months.

NEED — which can be reached at 386-6323 — has been in operation since May 10.

Six Selected For Canada's Diving Squad

QUEBEC (CP) — Six divers from Ontario and the western provinces have been selected to Canada's diving team for the 1971 Pan-American Games.

The Canadian Amateur Diving Association announced after trials that Beverly Boys, Nancy Robertson and Bob Eaton, all of the Oshawa Aquatic Club; Elizabeth Carruthers of Edmonton; Ron Friesen of the University of Saskatchewan, and Ken Sully of Simon Fraser University in Burnaby will make up Canada's diving team at the Pan-Am Games in Cali, Columbia, in late July and early August.

At the same time, the CADA announced that Don Webb, and Brian Middleton have been selected to coach the Pan-Am diving squad.

Ex-Black Hawk Art Wiebe Dies

EDMONTON (CP) — Funeral services were held today for Walter Donald (Art) Wiebe, 59, a defenceman for more than 10 years with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, a former Edmonton City amateur golf champion and a prominent curler.

Wiebe died from cancer after a lenghty illness.

In addition to his various sports achievments in the world of sport, Wiebe became president of an oil-drilling company after he retired from hockey and operated the family farm at Vermilion, Alta.

Fire Takes Over From Wreckers

Fire gutted a car while it was being stripped for parts at Bradley's welding and auto parts shop, 2730 Quadra, at 8:50 a.m. today.

The fire department said the 1959 car was being righted from its side when a spark from the lifting cable ignited spilled gasoline. There were no injuries.

Car Winner

R. P. Gibson of Sidney has won a Dodge Demon in the Saanich Kiwanis Club car raffle.

Hoop Teachers to Use Video Tape Playbacks

"Maximum individualized instruction" will be the keynote next month at a University of Victoria basketball clinic for boys aged nine to 13 this July.

To facilitate this goal, numbers in each of the two sessions will be restricted to 12 students per instructor.

New features of the clinic include lowered hoops and junior-sized basketballs to help skill progression among the nine and 10-year-olds and use of the Uvic video-tape machine to play back individual manoeuvres as a coaching aid.

NUMBERS LIMITED

Tutoring will include passing, dribbling, shooting and individual defence, with emphasis directed toward the latter two skills.

Boys, who will be limited to 24 per session, may register for one session for $20 or both sessions for $35.

Registration forms for both the July 5-16 and July 19-30 sessions may be obtained at the Uvic athletic office in "P" hut. Further information is available by telephoning 477-6911, local 357.

B.C. Chambers Want Ad Ban Repealed

KELOWNA (CP) — The three-day 20th annual convention of the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce ended Tuesday with adoption of a motion calling on Victoria to repeal before the next session of the legislature the bill amending the B.C. Liquor Act.

The amendment, effective Sept. 1, would ban liquor advertising in the province.

The resolution, sponsored jointly by the West Vancouver and Trail Chambers of Commerce, also voices opposition to the proposed ban on tobacco advertising.

The resolution asks that the provincial government, through the attorney-general, give instructions that the ban on liquor and tobacco advertising not be enforced.

Another resolution, sponsored by the North Vancouver chamber, asks that the provincial government institute a program whereby scrapped automobiles would have a salvage value such as to make it economically feasible to send them to a processing centre for recycling.

A resolution submitted by the greater Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce calls for the provincial government to institute a salt water game fishing licence. Defeated was a resolution asking for a provincial government ban on hitch-hiking.

The convention supported a resolution opposing tolls on bridges and roads leading to the Vancouver International Airport, with the exception of the Hudson Street Bridge, and Ottawa was asked to restrict the import of fresh and processed fruit from any country that denies entry to Canadian fruit.

Elected president was Cliff Laver of Courtenay. First vice-president is David Tate of Vancouver and second vice-president is Don Watson of Dawson Creek. Honorary Treasurer is A. R. Russell of Vancouver.

Doctors Against Drug Jailings

HALIFAX (CP) — Abolition of jail sentences for simple possession of any drug became Canadian Medical Association policy Tuesday — at least temporarily.

Although this was acknowledged to be the effect of a decision of the association's governing general council, further sessions of the council this week may modify that position.

The matter has become one of serious contention ever since the association's board of directors appeared before the Le Dain royal commission on non-medical use of drugs in April.

The directors deleted several recommendations which had been endorsed by the association's council on community health care. Among them was the proposal that drug possession should not be punishable by jail terms.

The Le Dain commission had made a similar recommendation to the federal government in its interim report made public months before the CMA delegation appeared.

Dean Gerald Le Dain, commission chairman, had asked for comments on this and on other recommendations so that they could be considered in preparing a final report to the government. The final report is to be handed to Health Minister John Munro later this summer.

The council on community health care and an expert committee objected to the action of the directors in deleting sections on abolition of jail terms and many others in the official CMA brief. The council's report was submitted only as an appendix.

Dr. Lionel Solursh, Toronto psychiatrist who was chairman of the expert committee which drafted the appendix, told the general council Tuesday that the directors had dropped nine of 14 major points on the drug use issue.

Flower Show

The 16th annual Victoria West Flower Show will be held Saturday from 2:30 to 9 p.m. in St. Saviour's parish hall, Catherine and Henry.

The divisions will include a rose section, novice rose section, flower arrangements, a children's section, miscellaneous flowers, fruit and vegetables.

There will also be a special Centennial Salute section.

Entries should be mailed or phoned to Mrs. J. C. Hunter, 536 Wilson, 384-9747 or W. W. Jenkins, 3480 Doncaster, 384-1488.

Flower Display, Competition

By HILDA BEASTALL

Two attractions this Saturday for anyone who responds to beauty are to be found in the 16th annual Victoria West Flower Show and a display of summer flowers by the Gordon Head Garden Club.

You will find the Victoria West show in St. Saviour's Parish Hall at the corner of Catherine and Henry streets, with doors open from 2:30 to 9 p.m. Admission price of 50 cents includes tea from 3 to 5 p.m., and again from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Roses will be featured at this show, with classes also for all the early summer perennials. The earliest of the fruits and vegetables always find a place, too.

Hilda

Victoria West is just over the Point Ellice Bridge from Government Street and Bay, or over the Johnson Street Bridge from downtown Victoria. If you want more than a glimpse of old brick buildings, ancient churches and houses still with the aura of the 1800s, visit "Vic West" on Saturday with the flower show as an excuse.

Some of the members of the Couples Club which is responsible for the show will be glad to fill you in on local points of interest.

The Gordon Head Garden Club is publicizing its Saturday show as a Rose Tea and Flower Display.

Admission is also 50 cents, including tea, with open doors from 2 to 4:30 p.m. only.

Look for the Gordon Head United Church Hall at 4375 Torquay Drive, where the club is presenting this informal display of flowers.

Whether you think the season is early or late, whether you have succeeded in getting your sweet peas to the flowering stage or perhaps forgot to sow them; whether you know a peony from a pyrethrum or not, you will find something of beauty to interest you at both of these shows.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer committed a faux pas in his play of a slam contract, and thereby (deservedly) went down to defeat. Can you spot South's mistake and bring it to light?

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

North should be criticized severely for his bid of four spades. He had a pretty horrible hand, and should have contented himself with a negative rebid of three no-trump. From South's point of view, he expected North to have at least three little spades. And if he had them, South figures to have no losing trump tricks. As it turned out, North's deficiency resulted in the arrival at a poor slam contract.

After winning the opening lead with his diamond king, South cashed the ace and king of trumps. As is evident, he had the good fortune to catch the queen.

With the hope that the six missing clubs were divided 3-3, or that he would catch either the queen or ten on the leads of the ace and king, South next led the ace of clubs, the king of clubs, and the nine of clubs. East, of course, captured the nine with the ten, after which he cashed the club queen, for the setting trick. What was declarer's error?

After winning the opening diamond lead, South should have cashed the ace and king of clubs immediately. If he caught either the ten or queen, trumps could then be drawn (with the fervent hope that the queen would fall). A club would then be given away, for declarer's only loser.

In the actual play, however, neither the queen nor ten would fall. Declarer would now lead a third club (if the six missing clubs were divided 3-3, declarer's fourth club would be a winner). East would win the third club lead, and return, let us say, a trump, which declarer would take with his ace.

South's fourth club would now be ruffed with dummy's remaining trump. The rest of the tricks would belong to declarer, since the king of trumps would fall East's queen.

Actually, declarer had to be lucky to fulfill the overbid slam contract: if the clubs didn't divide 3-3, then the success of the contract depended on the opponent who had the four clubs also having the queen of trumps.

Fun with Figures

By TAE HUNTER

Mike grinned. "I'm as old as the total of what you and Pete were three years ago."

"So what?" replied Joe.

"Pete's twice as old as I was three years ago, and I'm half as old as you'll be three years from now."

How old were they?

(Thanks for idea to M. Carter, Warren, Ohio.)

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: YOYO was 2020.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters; ideas welcomed.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

Saturday Evening Post Back as a Quarterly

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Saturday Evening Post resumed publication Tuesday as a quarterly.

At the time it suspended publication in 1969 because of economic conditions, dwindling circulation and management problems, the Post was the oldest magazine in America.

It had ceased publication only once previously, in 1754 in protest against the Stamp Act imposed by the British.

Five-Fold Return

SASKATOON (CP) — A $200,000 investment has brought a $1-million return to the city.

Jeff Charlebois, president of the Canada Winter Games Society, in presenting $210,000 to city council, listed the benefits that came to the city as a result of the mid-February sports event.

For its $200,000 contribution towards the capital costs, Saskatoon got a $600,000 ski facility at man-made Mount Blackstrap, a $70,000 speed-skating oval, $70,000 in sports equipment, $48,000 in rent and amusement tax and the $210,000 from a lottery set up to cover any possible games' deficit.

Ex-Policeman Jailed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A former Winnipeg police constable, convicted of committing a theft while a member of the force, Tuesday was sentenced to six months in jail.

Allen Rae MacDonald, 26, had pleaded guilty to the charge last week and was remanded for sentencing by Magistrate I. V. Dubienski.

Court was told McDonald, while investigating an April 8 break-in at Robin Hood Multifoods Ltd. in the city's north-central area, took several cartons of pickles and cake mixes.

Insects Bug Calgary

CALGARY (CP) — City council has added $10,000 to its mosquito budget and gave city commissioners authority to find new methods of controlling the insects.

The additional money increased the mosquito budget to about $18,000 this year.

Only Ald. Roy Farran opposed the move, calling it "a waste of time and money" to go beyond the spraying program now in progress.

Policies Needed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A set of international policies, most of which would be extremely difficult to implement effectively, are required to prevent grain surpluses and sagging grain prices on the international market in the 1970s, A. M. Runciman, the president of the United Grain Growers Ltd., said Tuesday.

Fiscal Crisis

EDMONTON (CP) — Municipalities in Canada face a fiscal crisis created by politics, not economics, Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton said Tuesday. He was speaking as president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, which presented a brief to the Parliamentary Committee on the Constitution.

'Accept or Resign'

WINNIPEG (CP) — premier Ed Schreyer said that Kris Kristjanson, Manitoba Hydro assistant general manager of administration, should consider resignation if he cannot accept the majority decision of the hydro board to proceed with regulation of Lake Winnipeg. The regulation would be part of the Nelson River Power Project.

Cashier Threatened

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bandit held a 10-inch knife to the throat of a parking lot cashier here, threatened to use it and then took $162.85 from the cashier. He tore the telephone from its socket before making off.

POINTLESS RECORD?

ARDAGH, Ireland (UPI) — Tim Hayes, 33, claimed a world record today by lying bareback on a bed of six-inch nails for three hours, 35 minutes and 11 seconds.

THE WEATHER

The next in the series of Pacific weather systems is approaching the north coast and will bring increasing cloud to the south coast today with rain beginning during the afternoon. This system is forecast to weaken considerably as it crosses the coast mountains late today and tonight and only patchy high cloud is expected over the southern interior tonight. Thursday will be sunny over all areas of the province except for the north coast. Here another Pacific distrubance will spread cloud in during the morning with rain beginning over the north coast by noon on Thursday. Afternoon temperatures on Thursday will be a little warmer over all areas except the north coast.

Aussie Stance Turning Pro-Peking

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
Canadian Press Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP) — The Australian government has decided to attempt a "dialogue" with China after a dramatic switch of policy on its approach to the Peking government, Prime Minister William McMahon announced the policy change eight days after an Australian ping-pong team returned from a two-week visit to China.

This correspondent accompanied the team on its tour of China, which was given extensive coverage in Australian newspapers. The Australians were treated with effusive hospitality and friendship.

McMahon denied that the Australian "dialogue" decision had anything to do with the ping-pong diplomacy of Premier Chou En-lai. But four days before we went into China Mr. McMahon was saying that Australia's "paramount objective" was to ensure that "Taiwan China" should remain a member of the United Nations. In his post-ping-pong statement, McMahon said it was Australia's objective to "normalize our bilateral relations with the government of the People's Republic of China."

Adding to McMahon's embarrassment is the Chinese government's decision to welcome a delegation from the opposition Labor party in Australia. This delegation, led by Labor Leader Gough Whitlam, will leave Australia for China June 27.

The Labor party applied in April for permission to send a delegation to China after it became known that China was not buying any more wheat from Australia this year.

Whitlam cabled Chou En-lai asking if an Australian Labor party delegation wanting to discuss trade and diplomatic relations with China would be welcome. The answer was "Yes."

Within hours, McMahon's cabinet met and decided on the dialogue.

McMahon insisted that his government had been planning for many months to improve relations with Peking but the timing of the government seemed hardly coincidental.

While in Peking I was told by Chinese officials that it seemed Australia was concerned only in trading with China and not with improving political relations.

The Chinese claimed Australia had followed the United States in being hostile to Peking for many years, had antagonized the Chinese government by recognizing the "Chiang Kai-shek clique" in Taiwan as the government of China and had opposed Peking's right to a seat in the United Nations.

Why China, however, included Australia in its ping-pong diplomacy has intrigued observers here. Perhaps not unconnected has been an intensive Russian effort to woo Australia. This has been going on for nearly two years and has resulted in the Australian government giving the Russians permission to establish a trade office and a Baltic Shipping Company office in Sydney and to agree to exchange visits by government ministers.

Presumably the Russians see Australia as having potential influence in the affairs of South-East Asia, an area of the world coming under increasing Russian interest. The Chinese are clearly aware of Russia's probings into South-East Asia and are concerned about them.

Chinese officials I spoke to in Peking reserved their most bitter denunciations for the Russians rather than the Americans. While state to state relations with the Soviet Union might be normalized, I was told, there seemed little hope of any genuine friendly relations between the two peoples.

These officials recalled with bitterness the withdrawal of Russian technicians and economic aid in 1960. "The Russians tried to strangle us," they said. The ideological split between the two Communist giants seemed deep and irrevocable.

But it was the warmth of the welcome given to the Australian table tennis players in China and the wide reporting of the tour that must have had an effect on the Australian government.

All of this has thrown Australia's foreign policy into a turmoil. For more than 20 years this nation has based its approach to the rest of the world on fear of invasion from the north.

China has been the No. 1 bogeyman, repeatedly named as a threat to Australia's security.

Ottawa's Price Fight 'Irrational, Bizarre'

Dr. Graham, head of economics and sociology at Dalhousie University, Halifax, attacked recent government attitudes towards price inflation and employment as irrational and bizarre.

Longer-run policies on poverty, the cities, housing and regional development have been failures, he said.

The economist, testifying at an inquiry into economic management before the Senate national finance committee, called for development of long-term planning.

He said policies need to sort out priorities between public good and private gain—between good television programs, for example, ahead of expensive color TV sets, or between lavish red-carpet airports and improved housing.

CAUSED UNEMPLOYMENT

In the most outspoken attack on recent government policies since the Senate inquiry opened almost six weeks ago—"I may have been rather too categorical," Dr. Graham said in an aside—the economist criticized the government's assault on inflation in 1969 and 1970 at the expense of jobs.

He charged that arguments used by Prime Minister Trudeau to defend government policies would not hold water.

"Although rapid inflation is a cause for concern, it is less serious than the unemployment generated by measures to combat it," he said.

"To be preoccupied with the plight of the housewife who faces increasing prices when she goes to buy groceries and to ignore the plight of the housewife whose husband has no pay cheque to buy groceries is irrational, to say the least . . .

"We now are in the strange position of having created unemployment to control inflation with the result that the quick elimination of unemployment is likely to generate even greater inflation than we would otherwise have had.

"To avoid this, we apparently must move back to full employment gradually over several years and pay the price of considerable unemployment and irretrievably-lost output when the country cries for things that need to be done."

Dr. Graham challenged the argument used by government spokesmen—most re-

AMENDMENTS to the British North America Act dealing with old-age pensions will be proposed by the Quebec and federal governments at next week's constitutional conference in Victoria, says Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa. More conference stories on Page 21.

CONTROLS LIKELY ON CIGARETTE ADS

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister John Munro gave formal notice today of federal legislation to restrict the promotion and sale of cigarettes.

No details of the legislation will be made public until the bill is presented to the Commons, probably Thursday.

However, the bill is expected to limit or ban cigarette advertising on television and through other media and to require a health hazard warning on the package.

Provincial legislation has banned cigarette advertising in B.C. as of Sept. 1.

'Nothing to Fear' In Tax Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Tuesday night that worried corporation executives can breathe a little easier over next week's new tax legislation because "it is nothing to fear."

In a speech to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Trudeau tiptoed carefully through a broad outline of his thinking on relationships between economic and social issues without once getting into specifics of the June 18 budget proposals.

Mr. Trudeau conceded there had been "an uneasiness in the business community" over tax legislation, lack of federal policy on foreign investment and unfinished formulation of "an all-encompassing energy policy."

"The first of those areas of uncertainty will disappear with the introduction next week of new tax legislation," Mr. Trudeau told 1,000 persons at the CMA banquet.

"The legislation is not something to fear. The Canadian dream of a socially-conscious, developed economy cannot be attained without the presence of a healthy manufacturing industry.

"You, unquestionably, know this. The government, I assure you, knows this."

Seniors Want More

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Senior Citizens' Association of British Columbia plans to ask the federal government to increase to $150 a month the old age pension available without a means test. Maximum now is $135.

B.C. Tel Ruling Appealed

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Federation of Labor announced today it will appeal a ruling that allowed B.C. Telephone Company to keep some of its financial dealings secret during a rate-increase hearing before the Canadian Transport Commission.

The ruling was made earlier Tuesday by the Canadian Transport Commission on the second day of a public hearing into the telephone company's application for a general rate increase.

The attorney-general's department and the federation had both asked that B.C. Telephone be ordered to supply details about its dealings with sister companies in the General Telephone and Electronic Corporation group.

Later Alex Macdonald, representing the federation, said the organization would refer the decision to the federal court, formerly the Exchequer Court, under a section of the Federal Court Act that allows the court's appeal division to set aside decisions of federal boards and commissions.

ADJOURNMENT

He also said that the federation would ask that the rate increase hearing be adjourned in the event an appeal was made to the federal court.

In announcing the commissions's ruling Tuesday, chairman Pierre Taschereau said the commissioners had sympathy for the principle that there be fuller disclosure but lacked the power to compel B.C. Telephone to detail its dealings with associates.

NO REVENUE

B.C. Tel received no revenue last year and expects none for the next two from its Okanagan Telephone Co. subsidiary, the federal rate increase hearing was told earlier.

Company comptroller D. B. McNeil said under cross-examination on the second day of the hearing into proposed rate increases by B.C. Tel that the Okanagan company estimates losses for 1971 and 1972 at $255,000 and $862,000, respectively.

This will mean no revenue to B.C. Tel for those years, he said. The larger company bought 99.8-per-cent controlling stock in the Okanagan utility in 1966 for $13 million and also holds long-term notes worth $9.5 million.

PREVIOUS YEAR

Dividends paid by Okanagan Telephone declined in 1969 to $165,000 from $331,111 in the previous year.

Mr. McNeil also said that rate increases to B.C. Tel will not affect the estimated

THIS GINTER ALE JUST GOES 'POP'

Times News Services

PRINCE GEORGE—"Something special from Uncle Ben"—soft drinks—are the newest products to be marketed in British Columbia in a beer bottle with a tartan label.

He says the beer bottles, which have a 12-ounce capacity in comparison to the 10 ounces of most soft drink bottles, are a good marketing feature.

Both Condon and brewery owner Ben Ginter denied that the use of the Ginter name and the tartan made familiar by Uncle Ben's beer is an attempt to circumvent a ban on liquor advertising scheduled to come into effect in British Columbia Sept. 1.

Condon and Glen Melin are the principals of Uncle Ben Beverages Ltd., which will market the new line. Melin also is general manager of Ben Ginter Construction Ltd.

Cutback If NATO 'Sincere'

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said today the Soviet Union is willing to reduce its armed forces in Europe if the NATO countries display a "sincere" position on bilateral withdrawals.

Kosygin said "The Soviet Union has displayed a new, important initiative — suggesting the start of negotiations on the reduction of armed forces" in Europe.

"We are ready for such reduction if, in fact, the NATO countries display a sincere position . . ."

NOT SATISFACTORY

Relations with the United States "cannot be called satisfactory," Kosygin said.

"In principle we desire better relations with the United States . . . at the same time we cannot draw a line between bilateral relations and the aggressive policies of the imperial circles in the United States, the barbarious actions in Indochina, contempt for other peoples and violation of their rights."

LITTLE DOUBT

Kosygin left little doubt about the Kremlin's position on mutual arms reduction in Europe. His full comment was:

"The Soviet Union displayed a new, important initiative in the interests of ensuring European security, having suggested a start in negotiations on the question of reducing arms and armed forces in central Europe.

"We are ready for such reductions if, certainly, the NATO countires indeed display a sincere position to the solution of this task which is so important for peace."

Loose Rock At Fraser Dam Site?

British Columbia Energy Board chairman Gordon Shrum said today it would be "premature" for him to discuss results of exploratory river drilling at the Moran Dam site on the Fraser.

Shrum said he could not confirm a report from drillers at the site, 130 miles northeast of Vancouver, indicating loose rock and gravel 250 feet deep. An engineer at the project said Tuesday the gravel could mean construction will be considerably more expensive.

Shrum said he has not received confirmation of the drilling results.

"I think that my judgment would have to be based on an engineering report, not on statements made by workers at the site," Shrum said.

He said the drilling is being done to determine the most suitable location for the Moran Dam. Results of one test site do not rule out other potential sites, Shrum said.

A full engineering report on the dam will be presented to the 1972 legislative session in February or March.

N.Y. TRAFFIC MOVES AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking municipal empoyees returned to work today after city and union leaders agreed to a proposal for ending the two-day walkout that throttled traffic Monday and spread to sewage treatment plants, incinerators, parks, beaches and even school lunch deliveries Tuesday.

Key to the four-point proposal by the city's office of collective bargaining was that the union's controversial pension plan would be resubmitted to the state legislature next year.

'QUIP' CATCHES UP TO NEW CMA HEAD

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Quebec Bureau

HALIFAX — The Canadian Medical Association's new president today described sterilization as "collective genocide."

Dr. H. D. Roberts, a 62-year-old Newfoundland general surgeon, explained that the large majority of persons submitting to voluntary sterilization at present are in the upper classes.

The result, he suggested, will be the eventual elimination of the classes which produce the better IQ children and provide generally better genetic material and a better rearing environment for their children.

He went on to say he thought that families on welfare, which he pictured as being generally much larger "should be made to practise birth control."

Earlier in the news conference he had referred to remarks by another unidentified indivudual who suggested that before a family goes on welfare, the man should have a vasectomy.

When asked specifically if he agreed with this philosophy Dr. Roberts said he didn't "disagree." But after the news conference he asked reporters to regard it as a "quip" — something that shouldn't be reported as coming from the president of the CMA, the 23,000-member national doctors' organization.

"What I am saying," he explained, during the news conference, "is that these are the families that are reproducing, have low IQs, very poor circumstances to bring up children (in), and they cannot produce the prominent citizens who will be the best calibre — that's what I'm trying to say."

In contrast to other forms of birth control and family planning, Dr. Roberts stressed that sterilization in both the male and female is "really doing it finally."

He suggested he wouldn't object to sterilization if it were being used through the whole population. And he noted that through improved education the classes using sterilization will work down.

He also suggested a large proportion of the people in upper classes who are now obtaining sterilization "are using it as a method of contraception," when other methods are available.

BETTING BUG BITES AUSSIES

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Sydney is a gambling-happy city in a gambling-prone state where an estimated $1.79 billion is fed into slot machines every year. Psychiatrists have developed a shock treatment to make addicts shun the one-armed bandits.

"It's called aversion therapy," said Dr. Karl Koller, who introduced the unit to St. George's Hospital. "The player begins to associate playing the machine with pain and keeps away from them.

"We decided to give this a try when the usual psychiatric method and pills didn't work. We believe the success rate to be around 60 per cent."

People are generally in desperate straits before they seek treatment.

"They vary from a lawyer spending hundreds of dollars a week on the machines to an elderly woman losing her pension money on them and going hungry as a result," Koller said.

"Pokies," as slot machines are called here, keep most of the big clubs in funds in New South Wales, the only state in Australia where they are legal. Last year income to the non-profit clubs was $143 million after a state tax cut of $34 million. On average every man, woman and child in the state loses $31 to the machines in a year.

The people who help boost this figure and who seek help at the hospital initially regard the treatment as a joke. They are led to a slot machine, given "play" coins, and asked to specify how severe a shock they wish. Most start at 20 volts and when they find this has little effect ask for 90 volts.

"Patients pick their own level of pain," said Koller. "Some are reduced to tears by the end of a treatment.

"One man was on his knees begging to be excused from pulling the machine arm again."

Patients do not know when the shocks will come. The average is 30 to 40 shocks during an hour's session.

Legal Gambling Looking Better

By JULES LOH

NEW YORK (AP) — Legalized-gambling proposals have become increasingly attractive to members of American state legislatures besieged by unmet social and educational needs.

"I've given up the fight against gambling," said Earl W. Brydges, majority leader of the New York Senate and a long-time foe of state-run gambling. "I'm looking at it pragmatically now."

Going all the way, Brydges has proposed that New York permit wide-open casinos to go along with its state-run lottery and legalized bookie parlors—outstripping even Nevada, which has no lottery.

The neighboring state of New Jersey, whose state-run lottery, launched last December, has exceeded its promoters' fondest hopes for raising revenue, also has before its legislature a proposal for a referendum to legalize casino gambling in Atlantic City. If the proposal gets on the ballot, the experts say it probably would pass with ease and inspire efforts to expand gambling to the entire Jersey shore.

However large or small the gambling profit, an increasing number of legislatures are coming to regard it as found money.

In most of the 29 states which permit horse and dog racing, official or unofficial committees are at work studying New York's experience with its new off-track parlors. Other states, including New York, are contemplating increases in the legal number of racing days allowed each year. A pending proposal in New Jersey: 365 days.

As it now stands the pari-mutuel rakeoff in the 29 states ranges only from about one per cent of total state revenue in, for example, Colorado and Nebraska, to about four per cent in Rhode Island and Florida.

Other states derive smaller, generally insignificant amounts indirectly from gambling, such as Louisiana which licences "gambling-type" pinball machines at the same rate it licences juke boxes.

A number of states are considering taxing bingo games, although few expect the rewards to be great. Where bingo is illegal, as in Pennsylvania, it generally is winked at when the profits are for educational or charitable purposes.

But not in Montana, where the incumbent attorney-general Robert L. Woodahl, was elected on a pledge to enforce all the laws and he meant all. He began shutting down bingo games in church basements and fraternal lodges all over the state and won the nickname Bingo Bob.

A check of more than half the states indicates that the most popular proposed source of new revenue is to make parimutuel horse racing legal in the states where it isn't, and the main argument is that home-town money is going to the states where it is.

Supporters of the measure in Missouri, for instance, are dismayed by all those Missouri licence plates in parking lots at race tracks across the border in Illinois.

States which are studying proposals for lotteries have envious eyes turned on New Jersey.

When introduceed, New Jersey's most hopeful estimate of the lottery's potential revenue was about $10 million a year. After one month, however, $2 million was already in the till and the experts doubled their projected estimate to $20 million—half the amount Nevada nets annually from its 24-hour casinos.

New Zealand Eyes Canadian Tourists

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand could achieve spectacular results by interesting more Canadians in tourist visits in the opinion of a tourist industry mission which has been touring North America.

The mission, comprising delegates from many of New Zealand's main tourist organizations, appeared to feel there is more unrealized scope for attracting tourists from Canada than even the United States.

The reason is that there are several New Zealand tourist offices already in the United States but none in Canada.

The National Travel and Holiday Association, an organization of companies and people interested in tourism, intends to urge the government to establish a tourist office in Canada.

The association's chief executive, N. E. Lobb, said on returning from North America that Canada has "tremendous tourist potential for New Zealand.

Per head of population, Canadians travel overseas in larger numbers than Americans, he said.

"The main destination for Canadians in the past has been Europe and then the Caribbean," he said, "but their attention now is turning to the Pacific where they can go during the severe northern winter."

A hotel room in the peak Caribbean tourist season now costs as much as $60 a day. Even though the air fare to New Zealand costs more, the price of accommodation is much lower.

But New Zealand will not capture the market unless it has a separate tourist office in Canada. The government tourist and publicity department has an office in New York to serve the Canadian market. But Canadians do not like to be served from the United States.

'Arrogant, Inhuman' Rent Board Attitude Hit by Tenant Head

The Victoria rental advisory board was accused Tuesday of bearing an "arrogant, inhuman attitude towards tenants" for suggesting renters find new homes if their present rents are too high.

Mrs. Anne Tarasoff, executive secretary of the Capital Region Tenant Organization, said some board members of the Rental Accommodation Advisory Board have "no conception" of what it is like for people on fixed income when their rents are arbitrarily raised.

Mrs. Tarasoff's remarks were contained in a prepared brief she read to the board's meeting Tuesday afternoon.

She said the advisory board "has been of benefit" to renters but it lacks the legal power it needs to be successful in preventing "gouging" of tenants by landlords.

To suggest, as the board has done, that tenants unhappy with rent increased move to new accommodations with lower rents is an "arrogant, inhuman attitude towards renters," Mrs. Tarasoff said.

Calling landlords a "law unto themselves," she said "It's the kind of profits they want to make on the basic rents of people that we object to."

But she said the tenant organization is not in favor of "rent controls as such."

Increases in rents should not exceed any increase in costs of operating the building, she said.

Mrs. Tarasoff said there are many instances of unjustified rent increases, but gave only one example. The rents at the Louise Apartment, 1143 Pandora, had shown increases of up to 35 per cent since 1969.

The tenant organization called for a city bylaw to be established under provincial enabling statues, a stop to increased power for landlords, and assurances that the city would not institute security deposits.

Board member Jack Vaio said there is nothing the board can do about the Louise Apartments but in any case the rents are "not exhorbitant." He called the apartments a "beautiful little building."

He added that in Victoria property owners "are not making money" on property investments.

Tosh Indignant Over Welfare, May Be Going Back to London

One of Victoria's more authentic bits of Olde England may be lost soon if council doesn't change its mind about selling goods on city property

Tosh the barrow boy, whose fruit stand had become a familiar part of Bastion Square, says he will not "disgrace" his pearly king costume by living on social welfare, and threatens to go back to England.

Tosh, whose real name is Pat Kelleher, was turned down by council a month ago when he applied to operate his fruit stand at the entrance to the CPR docks on the south side of the Inner Harbor.

His former sponsors, the merchants of Bastion Square, did not renew his contract last year.

Now Tosh has written another letter to council, applying again to operate his stand near the air taxi station by the waterfront.

"I am now on social security from the 4th of June, and with this I disagree when I am available and can be useful for the tourist trade, and willing to play my part.

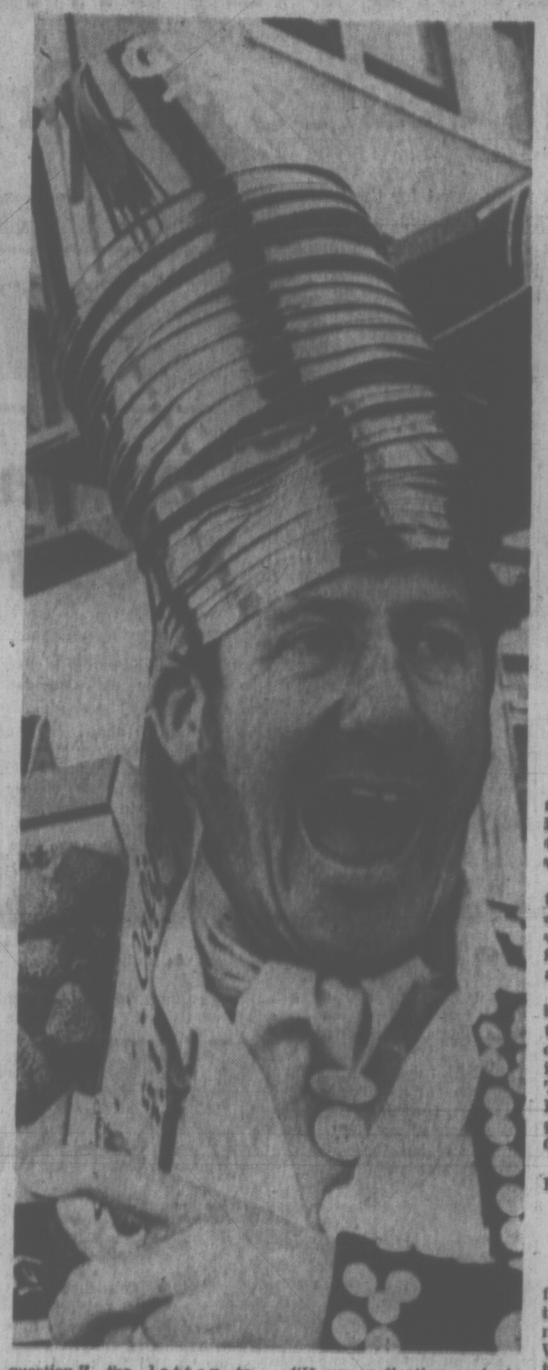
"As to the wearing of the pearly king costume, I do not want to disgrace it by being on social security."

Tosh's history includes becoming a barrow boy's helper at the age of 15 and at one time he was making £20 plus commissions working for the Covent Garden Fruit and Vegetable Association.

"I understand that one of the objections to my previous application was the hampering of traffic, but this would not apply to the area in question," the letter to council continues.

"I feel I could be worth while to myself and to others by serving the tourist industry at Victoria Harbor — literally the gateway to Victoria.

"If my application again is not recommended, my intentions are, through the authority of Victoria, for my family (my three children and myself) to be repatriated back to England."



Ottawa Approves $500,000 Grant

Formal approval has been given by the federal government to Victoria's request for $500,000 in urban renewal funds, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday.

Under an urban renewal formula, federal and provincial grants will amount to $750,000 and the city will contribute another $250,000.

The $1 million total will pay for most of the cost of acquiring the Ocean Cement factory and property at the foot of Humboldt on Wharf, where a small park and marina are planned. The cement factory acquisition is considered a key move in getting redevelopment started in the area.

As planned, the full urban renewal program for the Inner Harbour waterfront has a cost of about $4.5 million.

Uvic Trio Awaits Word of Hearings

The three University of Victoria faculty members whose contracts were not renewed don't know yet if they have been invited to attend hearings next week into circumstances surrounding the non-renewals.

Neither does Faculty Association president Charles Doyle, who only learned of the hearings Tuesday night when contacted by a reporter.

Doyle said today the fact the association had not been contacted about the hearings would do little to restore faculty confidence in the Uvic administration.

A three-man panel headed by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court will open public hearings Tuesday into the cases of chemist Dr. Tikam Jain, English teacher Dr. William Goede and philosophy teacher J. P. Graff.

The other members of the panel are Vancouver lawyer Brian Carrothers and University of B.C. Professor Vladimir Okulitch.

The hearings were announced Tuesday by Duncan lawyer David Williams who is acting as solicitor for the tribunal. Williams said 28 invitations have been issued to people directly concerned in the non-renewal affair.

According to the Universities Act, the tribunal is an advisory board which doesn't have the power to call or swear witnesses, Williams said.

He said the hearings would be open to anyone who had testimony to give about the cases of the three teachers.

Handled by University

When asked today why the faculty association had not been informed about the nature of the hearings, Judge Wilson said from Vancouver that the mechanics of the hearings were being handled by the university.

He said he wanted to make it clear he had not named the other members of the tribunal, but when asked to do so had suggested some names and the university had approved them.

Doyle commented:

"It would have been a polite gesture to inform us about the nature of the hearings. We hope these gentlemen will come up with reasonable findings, but even if they do this way of doing things is not any kind of long-term solution."

Doyle said when names of the tribunal members were announced he was given to understand its terms of reference would be discussed and that the faculty association would be included in the discussions.

Still later, Doyle said, he heard that while faculty members would not have a voice in setting terms of reference, they would be included in a discussion of procedures to be followed during the hearings.

Today he said:

"It seems evident that we are not going to be consulted about procedures either."

Hearings will open at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of the MacLaurin Building.

City Hydro Hit By Spot-Strike

Rotating one-day strikes by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against B.C. Hydro hit Victoria today.

Fifty-five line crew men did not report to work this morning. Not involved are the men who work in electrical sub-stations. No pickets were posted.

Another 28 electrical workers were out in Cranbrook, while 70 workers who left their jobs Tuesday at Courtenay, Chilliwack and Abbotsford went back this morning.

The IBEW is conducting 24-hour strikes against B.C. Hydro to back contract proposals. The union is seeking an 18½ per cent wage increase in a two-year contract and protection for employees against contracting out of work. B.C. Hydro has offered 7 per cent more in any year of a one, two or three-year agreement.

The Victoria men on strike today normally carry out maintenance and construction of electrical distribution.

Asked if the strike will affect operations, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said "no, operations will carry on normally. If there are any problems we'll do our best to cope with them."

Doug Cronk of Vancouver, business manager of IBEW Local 258, who was in Victoria today, said the men are expected to return to work Thursday morning.

Asked what will happen if there are emergencies, he said the union has a policy of establishing a system to take care of them but in Victoria, after two days of meetings, Victoria management would not agree to this policy.

"The responsibility is on B.C. Hydro," said Cronk. "We have offered it, and they have said no. There has been no such problem anywhere else in B.C. regarding emergency coverage."

Cronk said the union policy to protect the public is in the case of emergencies. He mentioned hospitals, major fires and any problem with primary power such as live lines on cars.

Hearing Set for June 29 On Sunro Mine Appeal

The Pollution Control Board will hear on June 29 the appeal of a mine company near Jordan River which has been refused a permit to discharge tailings into Juan de Fuca Strait.

The hearing will open at 10 a.m. in room 104 of the Provincial Museum and while the public can attend, only the nine parties which have qualified as objectors will be heard besides the company.

The Pollution Control Branch declined to identify the nine objectors today because letters advising them of the appeal have just gone out. Their names will be available Friday.

The appeal has been launched on behalf of Sunro mine which last week learned that its application to discharge up to a million gallons daily of mine tailings from a pipe just below the low tide line had been refused by William Venables, the province's director of pollution control.

While some residents near Jordan River, commercial fishermen and conservationists are among those who opposed the application, wording of the announcement from the PCB last week hinted that confidential recommendations from two government departments — health, and recreation and conservation — had been major factors in Venables' decision.

On the latter point, E. C. Dobell, vice-president of Crownex International, said today the two departments had not seen the explanatory material the company had forwarded to the PCB with its application, even though a company officer had checked more than once to see if it had been passed along.

A spokesman for the PCB refused to confirm or deny this, saying there would be no comment because the case was subjudice, active and unresolved before the judicial process.

The Pollution Control Board is a six-member body to which appeals can be made from decisions of the Pollution Control Branch. Its decisions in turn can be appealed to either the cabinet or the provincial supreme court.

Board chairman is Valter Raudsepp, deputy minister of water resources. Other members are Dr. J. A. Taylor, deputy minister of health; R. G. McMynn, director of commercial fisheries, department of recreation and conservation; J. W. Peck, chief inspector of mines; Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie from the medical faculty at UBC and James Ailin, department of agriculture.

NO FREE FARES FROM VICTORIA

Take Warning, Transients

Victoria city hall wants to put up a sign at the Lower Mainland ferry terminal warning transients that return fares are not available here simply for the asking.

A special meeting between aldermen and welfare representatives was held Tuesday at the request of the Salvation Army, which has received 142 requests for ferry fares this year, compared to last year's figure of 25.

Ald. Ove Witt suggested the city ask the province for permission to erect a sign at Tsawwassen terminal, warning transients of the tight money situation in Victoria.

"We must slow them down," Ald. Percy Frampton commented. "They ask for a ticket to Vancouver and we don't know whether they have 50 bucks in their pockets," he said.

LUCKILY FOR MY trade, the time is long past when newsmen whose scrivenings displeased authority stood in danger of losing their ears. If it weren't, Victoria's city hall reporters might today be combing their hair low on the sides.

Their offence, as seen through the eyes of irked officialdom, was that they declined to be muzzled by an entirely uncalled-for off the record order with which Victoria's Mayor Haddock chose to cap some last-week utterances about the Hare Krishna street people.

As a result — and in proof that medieval thinking persists in some quarters — the bogey of the closed committee meeting has been conjured up in attempt to intimidate the press.

The gist of this threat is that city council has the right to bar reporters from committee meetings, and that reporters should keep the fact in mind when asked to withold items from the record.

In other words, submit to a form of news censorship, or else!

The closed committee meeting by one Greater Victoria council or another is not a new device. Its effect is to keep the voter from learning how local issues that concern him are to be dealt with until the governing body concerned is ready to tip its hand.

Once in a long while, there may be a legitimate reason for such a conclave. Generally, though, you the taxpayer would do well to question the motives of the politician who insists that the groundwork of city or municipal decisions must go unreported.

"Off the record" isn't a new political device, either. There are times when such a request is perfectly legitimate, and deserves to be respected. But as every reporter speedily learns, it is leaned on far too heavily by men in public life who see it as a convenient escape-hatch by which they can avoid the embarrassment of standing behind their less inspired utterances.

Mayor Haddock, of course, has a right to air his views on street-chanters or on any other sjubect. But the mayoral right does not extend to telling the press of this city what it may or may not print.

Two weeks ago, former Timesman Jim Bigsby and his family set out for their home in Vancouver after visiting relatives and friends in Victoria. On the way their car was involved in a crackup that sent five persons to hospital.

"Reports of auto crashes are traditionally news," friend Jim writes, "but who ever heard of a news item written by the crash victims, containing what they thought was important?"

He then goes on to turn out such a report.

"Several passing motorists assisted at the scene of an auto accident on the Pat Bay Highway May 25. One who stopped to help was Dr. Roy Smillie, who had the foresight to carry field dressings in his car. He directed first aid operations and was instrumental in preventing possible tragedy.

"The Central Saanich volunteer ambulances responded within minutes, gathered by a home-call system as efficient as it is personal. Operating under pressure, they were nonetheless effective and very reassuring to the victims.

"In the emergency wards of Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's and Rest Haven Hospitals, the skills and warmth of a series of doctors and nurses were brought into play. Friends and relatives appeared in astonishing numbers to do the many chores that needed to be done, and to cheerfully visit during those long days in hospital."

There's a good word too for Central Saanich police, who made it to the scene less than a minute after the call was received.

Bigsby appends a couple of pleas to his victim's-eye account.

"1. To passengers and drivers: wear seat belts, no matter how uncomfortable they feel. I think they saved our lives. They might save yours.

"2. To drivers, including me: be careful in that car, for your sake as well as the other guy's, because it hurts."

Words worth heeding, from one who's been there, and considers himself lucky to have survived the experience!

Batten Down That Neckline

By LOIS HOLMES

There are never too many helpful hints for good finishing on your hand knit or crocheted garments. I have an excellent tip for you which was devised by a famous studio designer, Audrey Hurst, who has just joined our staff.

When you have a wide, square neckline on a dress that is at least four inches deep and has a tendency to gap or stretch, follow these simple procedures.

After the neckline has been finished to your satisfaction, and you want to be sure that it stays that way, measure narrow flat elastic from one front corner around to the centre back.

Cut two pieces. Sew one end of each piece to the wrong side of each front corner. On the other end of each piece, sew a hook and eye, respectively. These are fastened after the dress is put on.

This will insure the constant good fitting of the neckline and it will never fall away from the chest area.

Here is another tip from my new assistant, Andrea. When knitting or crocheting a brimmed hat, it is a good idea to stabilize the inside area where crown and brim meet. With matching yarn or straw, work at least one row slip stitch on wrong side. Be sure to keep in mind desired head size.

Mrs. W. O. of Plainview, Neb., has sent me a very interesting tip on a novel way to put a slide fastener on your hand knit or crocheted garments.

Sew the slide fastener on grosgrain ribbon, but be sure that the ribbon has been washed or that you use the pre-shrunk kind.

After you have the slide fastener on the ribbon, hand stitch it securely to the sweater or garment with small even stitches. It gives a very neat finish.

Eaton's Top Furrier can add Years of Wear and Modern Styling to your Old Fur Coat, Thurs., Fri., and Sat., June 10th, 11th and 12th.

Fur, we all know, never goes out of date.
But fur coat styling can.

Lining will age. And a few rips occur. But that's no reason to give up what was initially a large investment. Eaton's top furrier, Mr. R. Cannon, will give you advice without obligation, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, on how to remodel your old fur. Make it into a contemporary dream. Or just make minor adjustments. After over forty years in the fur trade, our man Mr. Cannon knows just what to look for. Knows how much alteration can be managed. And knows all the hidden secrets on how to revitalize what may have become your second-choice coat.

For Example: A full length, large collar coat with large sleeves and cuff, matted fur, a few rips and old lining can become a modern trotter of the latest styling. Cleaned, back grooved, with modern lining. And maybe, if sufficient fur is left over, you can have a bonus cape to set off another ensemble.

Another Example: Our skilled furrier can counsel you as to how to achieve the style of your choice from an old, but still good fur with "football" shoulders, flared back and "parachute" sleeves. Reliable counsel backed by years of experience. With no obligation to you.

Meet Mr. R. Cannon
Thursday, Friday and Saturday—10:00 a.m. to 12 noon
2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
Thursday and Friday—7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.
at the Fur Salon, Floor of Fashion

Scientists Idle

PALO ALTO, Calif (AP) — U.S. defence and aerospace spending cuts have thrown at least 30,000 scientists and engineers out of work, causing a "decaying technological superiority of the United States among developed nations of the world," New Study concludes. The Stanford Research Institute report, released Monday, calls for a federal program to ensure that they retain their skills and are reoriented into jobs.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Strong Advance at Toronto

AT TORONTO, volume at 2 p.m. was 1.76 million shares, down from 1.86 million at the same time Tuesday.

Strongest sectors were banks, merchandising, utilities and pipelines.

Among advancing issues, Bell was up 1¼ to $48, Canada Cement 1⅛ to $43¾, Northgate ½ to $11, Asamera ⅝ to $22⅝ and Stelco ⅜ to $27⅝.

Canadian Imperial Bank climbed ⅝ to $24½, Dominion Stores ⅜ to $12½, TransCanada Pipelines ¾ to $32⅝, Central-Del Rio ¼ to $13¾ and Bank of Montreal ⅝ to $16.

AT NEW YORK, the volatile glamor issues firmed after having paced the sharp decline Tuesday and the milder slide in early trading.

The extent of the setback continued to be broad with prices among the motors, electronics, non-ferrous metals, rails, airlines, tobaccos and building materials mostly lower.

Prices in late trading included Delta Airlines, off 1⅛ to $45⅛; IBM, up 1½ to $314; Reynolds Metals, off ⅞ to $27¼; Burroughs, up 1⅜ to $123⅛; Continental Foods, up ⅜ to $46; and Phillips Petroleum, up ⅞ to $31⅛.

AT MONTREAL, the banks index reached a 1971 high as prices climbed strongly in all sectors.

Combined volume on the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges at 1 p.m. was 938,100 shares, compared with 881,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Highlighting gains on the Montreal Stock Exchange, B.C. Telephone rose $2¾ to $67½, Canada Cement Lafarge $1¼ to $43½, Bell Canada $1¼ to $48¾, Bank of Nova Scotia ¾ to $26½, Royal Bank ¾ to $26¾ and Bank of Commerce ⅝ to $24½.

Highlighting losses, R. L. Crain dropped $1¼ to $14¼, International Utilities $1 to $42¾, Alberta Natural Gas ⅝ to $23⅝, Denison Mines ⅝ to $25½ and Hollinger Mines ½ to $39½.

AT LONDON, the market was easier in light selling. Economic uncertainties and Tuesday's Wall Street downturn were seen as the main influences.

Rank A, Plessey, GEC, Dunlop and Unilever were down, but ICI and Decca bucked the trend.

Canadian shares were generally lower, with Brascan, Dome, Hudson Bay Oil and Gas, Canadian Pacific, Hollinger, Massey-Ferguson, International Nickel, and Trans-Canada Pipe-Line easier. Westfield, Yukon, Pacific Pete and Canadian Husky were firmer.

AT VANCOUVER prices showed a definite downward swing in pre-noon trading. Volume to 11:30 a.m. was 1,356,927 shares.

Venus led the plunge on the mines board, falling 16 cents to .14 on trading of 135,000 shares. Great Northern Petroleum was up .08, however, trading at $1.43.

Melton Real Estate was active among industrials, trading 10,022 shares at $1.45, unchanged. Ionarc was unchanged at $1.50 and Imperial Marine was up .10 at $2.40

In the oils, Freehold led trading at 34,900 shares and dropped a nickel to .70. Futurity was off .01 at .29 and Canarctic was off the same amount at .46.

Russians Push Force Reductions

Cutback If NATO 'Sincere'

MOSCOW (UPI)— Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said today the Soviet Union is willing to reduce its armed forces in Europe if the NATO countries display a "sincere" position on bilateral withdrawals.

Kosygin said "the Soviet Union has displayed a new, important initiative — suggesting the start of negotiations on the reduction of armed forces" in Europe.

"We are ready for such reduction if, in fact, the NATO countries display a sincere position . . ."

NOT SATISFACTORY

Relations with the United States "cannot be called satisfactory," Kosygin said.

"In principle we desire better relations with the United States . . . at the same time we cannot draw a line between bilateral relations and the aggressive policies of the imperial circles in the United States, the barbarious actions in Indochina, contempt for other peoples and violation of their rights."

LITTLE DOUBT

Kosygin left little doubt about the Kremlin's position on mutual arms reduction in Europe. His full comment was:

"The Soviet Union displayed a new, important initiative in the interests of ensuring European security, having suggested a start in negotiations on the question of reducing arms and armed forces in central Europe.

"We are ready for such reductions if, certainly, the NATO countries indeed display a sincere position to the solution of this task which is so important for peace."

B.C. Tel Ruling Appealed

VANCOUVER (CP)— The British Columbia Federation of Labor announced today it will appeal a ruling that allowed B.C. Telephone Company to keep some of its financial dealings secret during a rate-increase hearing before the Canadian Transport Commission.

The ruling was made earlier Tuesday by the Canadian Transport Commission on the second day of a public hearing into the telephone company's application for a general rate increase.

The attorney-general's department and the federation had both asked that B.C. Telephone be ordered to supply details about its dealings with sister companies in the General Telephone and Electronic Corporation group.

Later Alex Macdonald, representing the federation, said the organization would refer the decision to the federal court, formerly the Exchequer Court, under a section of the Federal Court Act that allows the court's appeal division to set aside decisions of federal boards and commissions.

ADJOURNMENT

He also said that the federation would ask that the rate increase hearing be adjourned in the event an appeal was made to the federal court.

In announcing the commissions's ruling Tuesday, chairman Pierre Taschereau said the commissioners had sympathy for the principle that there be fuller disclosure but lacked the power to compel B.C. Telephone to detail its dealings with associates.

NO REVENUE

B.C. Tel received no revenue last year and expects none for the next two from its Okanagan Telephone Co. subsidiary, the federal rate increase hearing was told earlier.

Company comptroller D. B. McNeil said under cross-examination on the second day of the hearing into proposed rate increases by B.C. Tel that the Okanagan company estimates losses for 1971 and 1972 at $255,000 and $662,000, respectively.

This will mean no revenue to B.C. Tel for those years, he said. The larger company bought 99.8-per-cent control*ling stock in the Okanagan* utility in 1966 for $13 million and also holds long-term notes worth $9.5 million.

PREVIOUS YEAR

Dividends paid by Okanagan Telephone declined in 1969 to $165,000 from $331,111 in the previous year.

Mr. McNeil also said that rate increases to B.C. Tel will not affect the estimated

THIS GINTER ALE JUST GOES 'POP'

Times News Services

PRINCE GEORGE—"Something special from Uncle Ben"—soft drinks—are the newest products to be marketed in British Columbia in a beer bottle with a tartan label.

He says the beer bottles, which have a 12-ounce capacity in comparison to the 10 ounces of most soft drink bottles, are a good marketing feature.

Both Condon and brewery owner Ben Ginter denied that the use of the Ginter name and the tartan made familiar by Uncle Ben's beer is an attempt to circumvent a ban on liquor advertising scheduled to come into effect in British Columbia Sept. 1.

Condon and Glen Melin are the principals of Uncle Ben Beverages Ltd., which will market the new line. Melin also is general manager of Ben Ginter Construction Ltd.

Ottawa's Price Fight 'Irrational, Bizarre'

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal methods of managing the national economy came under withering attack today from John F. Graham, president of the Canadian Economics Association.

Dr. Graham, head of economics and sociology at Dalhousie University, Halifax, attacked recent government attitudes towards price inflation and employment as irrational and bizarre.

Longer-run policies on poverty, the cities, housing and regional development have been failures, he said.

The economist, testifying at an inquiry into economic management before the Senate national finance committee, called for development of long-term planning.

He said policies need to sort out priorities between public good and private gain—between good television programs, for example, ahead of expensive color TV sets, or between lavish red-carpet airports and improved housing.

CAUSED UNEMPLOYMENT

In the most outspoken attack on recent government policies since the Senate inquiry opened almost six weeks ago—"I may have been rather too categorical," Dr. Graham said in an aside—the economist criticized the government's assault on inflation in 1969 and 1970 at the expense of jobs.

He charged that arguments used by Prime Minister Trudeau to defend government policies would not hold water.

"Although rapid inflation is a cause for concern, it is less serious than the unemployment generated by measures to combat it," he said.

"To be preoccupied with the plight of the housewife who faces increasing prices when she goes to buy groceries and to ignore the plight of the housewife whose husband has no pay cheque to buy groceries is irrational, to say the least . . .

"We now are in the strange position of having created unemployment to control inflation with the result that the quick elimination of unemployment is likely to generate even greater inflation than we would otherwise have had.

"To avoid this, we apparently must move back to full employment gradually over several years and pay the price of considerable unemployment and irretrievably lost output when the country cries for things that need to be done."

Dr. Graham challenged the argument used by government spokesmen—most re-

CONTROLS LIKELY ON CIGARETTE ADS

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister John Munro gave formal notice today of federal legislation to restrict the promotion and sale of cigarettes.

No details of the legislation will be made public until the bill is presented to the Commons, probably Thursday.

However, the bill is expected to limit or ban cigarette advertising on television and through other media and to require a health hazard warning on the package.

Provincial legislation has banned cigarette advertising in B.C. as of Sept. 1.

'Nothing to Fear' In Tax Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Tuesday night that worried corporation executives can breathe a little easier over next week's new tax legislation because "it is nothing to fear."

In a speech to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Trudeau tiptoed carefully through a broad outline of his thinking on relationships between economic and social issues without once getting into specifics of the June 18 budget proposals.

Mr. Trudeau conceded there had been "an uneasiness in the business community" over tax legislation, lack of federal policy on foreign investment and unfinished formulation of "an all-encompassing energy policy."

"The first of those areas of uncertainty will disappear with the introduction next week of new tax legislation," Mr. Trudeau told 1,000 persons at the CMA banquet.

"The legislation is not something to fear. The Canadian dream of a socially-conscious, developed economy cannot be attained without the presence of a healthy manufacturing industry.

"You, unquestionably, know this. The government, I assure you, knows this."

Loose Rock At Fraser Dam Site?

British Columbia Energy Board chairman Gordon Shrum said today it would be "premature" for him to discuss results of exploratory river drilling at the Moran Dam site on the Fraser.

Shrum said he could not confirm a report from drillers at the site, 130 miles northeast of Vancouver, indicating loose rock and gravel 250 feet deep. An engineer at the project said Tuesday the gravel could mean construction will be considerably more expensive.

Shrum said he has not received confirmation of the drilling results.

"I think that my judgment would have to be based on an engineering report, not on statements made by workers at the site," Shrum said.

He said the drilling is being done to determine the most suitable location for the Moran Dam. Results of one test site do not rule out other potential sites, Shrum said.

A full engineering report on the dam will be presented to the 1972 legislative session in February or March.

'QUIP' CATCHES UP TO NEW CMA HEAD

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Quebec Bureau

Dr. H. D. Roberts, a 62-year-old Newfoundland general surgeon, explained that the large majority of persons submitting to voluntary sterilization at present are in the upper classes.

The result, he suggested, will be the eventual elimination of the classes which produce the better IQ children and provide generally better genetic material and a better rearing environment for their children.

He went on to say he thought that families on welfare, which he pictured as being generally much larger "should be made to practise birth control."

Earlier in the news conference he had referred to remarks by another unidentified individual who suggested that before a family goes on welfare, the man should have a vasectomy.

When asked specifically if he agreed with this philosophy Dr. Roberts said he didn't "disagree." But after the news conference he asked reporters to regard it as a "quip" — something that shouldn't be reported as coming from the president of the CMA, the 23,000-member national doctors' organization.

"What I am saying," he explained, during the news conference, "is that these are the families that are reproducing, have low IQs, very poor circumstances to bring up children (in), and they cannot produce the prominent citizens who will be the best calibre — that's what I'm trying to say."

In contrast to other forms of birth control and family planning, Dr. Roberts stressed that sterilization in both the male and female is "really doing it finally."

He suggested he wouldn't object to sterilization if it were being used through the whole population. And he noted that through improved education the classes using sterilization will work down.

He also suggested a large proportion of the people in upper classes who are now obtaining sterilization "are using it as a method of contraception," when other methods are available.

N.Y. TRAFFIC MOVES AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking municipal empoyees returned to work today after city and union leaders agreed to a proposal for ending the two-day walkout that throttled traffic Monday and spread to sewage treatment plants, incinerators, parks, beaches and even school lunch deliveries Tuesday.

Key to the four-point proposal by the city's office of collective bargaining was that the union's controversial pension plan would be resubmitted to the state legislature next year.
